CONGRESS.

Both Houses Engrossed with the Slavery Agitation.

Speeches of Messrs. Trumbull, Davis, Clay and Wilson, in the Senate.

Mesrs. Davis, of Mississippi, and Corwin and Cox, of Ohio, in the House.

NO BALLOT FOR SPEAKER.

[Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.]

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Dec. 8.

The debate in Congress continues to draw crowded galleries, which indulge in free and unlimited applause, but no progress is made towards an organization.

Mr. COBB to-day delivered an amusing, though conciliatory speech, in which he reproaches Mr. SEWARD as a Republican leader. His complimentary remarks upon Virginia and South Carolina were received with apparent pleasure by Senators MASON and HAMMOND, who had entered the House at the moment, and remained standing just in the rear of the members. His speech was not regarded by Republicans as well-timed, and some were uncharitable enough to pronounce it a bid for the Speakership.

Mr. COX, of Ohio, took issue with his colleague, as to the position of the Republican party in their State, and a severe fire was kept up till a late hour, much to the gratification of the galleries, where, in the meantime, a fight occurred between a Virginian and an advocate of SEWARD's, without, however, interrupting the current of debate on the floor below.

No slight is the prospect for an early organization, and Speculation conditions were offered in market to-day at ninety-four cents.

Efforts continue to debate Mr. MASON's resolution with much feeling.

Senator TRUMBULL to-day also denounced Mr. SEWARD as the leader of the Republican Party. He recognized no leader. In reply to inquiries he said that the admission of a new State would not be opposed by him in consequence of its having a constitution sanctioning Slavery. He regarded Slavery as existing in this District by the force of local laws, and he would never interfere with the relation of master and slave where it existed.

Mr. TRUMBULL's speech was as candid as it was conservative and eloquent.

The First Comptroller of the Treasury has refused to approve the allowance to Missouri of four hundred and fifty thousand dollars, as a percentage on land sales as constituted by the General Land Office. This fund was looked to for the means wherewith to pay the interest shortly due on the Missouri Bonds.

Q.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Dec. 8.

Mr. BENJAMIN, of Louisiana, (Dem.,) gave notice of his intention to introduce a bill making an appropriation to facilitate negotiations for the acquisition of Cuba.

Mr. JOHNSON, of Tennessee, (Dem.,) gave similar notice of a Homestead bill.

Several other notices were given, including one for the construction of a railroad in Pennsylvania avenue, Washington.

Mr. MASON's resolution came up, when Mr. TRUMBULL, of Illinois, (Rep.,) resumed his remarks, showing the importance of an inquiry relative to the sacking of the arsenal at Liberty, Mo. The seizure of an armed security is regarded as a matter of great importance, yet the President, in his message, never alluded to the seizure of the arsenal in Missouri. A resolution was adopted in March, 1856, calling on the President for all the information in the Departments relative to the affairs of Kansas, yet the report of Capt. LEAVENS has never been sent to the Senate. He proceeded, in reply to an inquiry of Mr. YULEE, to lay down the principles of the Republican Party, quoting their platform, and defending the doctrines therein contained.

Mr. SAULSBURY, of Delaware, (Dem.,) inquired if the Constitution gave power to establish Slavery there?

Mr. TRUMBULL replied it was a Constitution of freedom and not Slavery; the word slave don't occur in it.

Mr. YULEE, of Florida, (Dem.,) stated that it appeared from this that the whole object of the Republican Party was to exclude Slavery from the Territories. He desired to know whether the exclusion did not apply to the District of Columbia, and all the forts and arsenals which were under the jurisdiction of the National Government? How was it in the new States of the Union? For a logical sequence his argument would be that slaves are now illegally held in Louisiana and Missouri, and every other new State. He wanted light on these matters for it was a serious question. The doctrines of the Republican Party plant the seeds of revolution. That is a platform on which it is impossible for the country to stand. The Union have his been introduced, out of which will flow equal disunion to the existence of the country.

Mr. TRUMBULL thought the gentleman entirely mistaken as to the principles and views of the Republicans. He would endeavor to enlighten them in a calm and candid manner. He did not like to hear them use the word South in this matter. Not more than one-fifth of the people South are slaveholders, and that class should not arrogate to themselves that they are the South. The exclusion of Slavery from the Territories operates on all alike. Northern men will have no more right to carry slaves there than Southern men. The Republican Party had its origin in the question of Slavery in the Territories. This national question was not settled; and the Democratic Party unsettled it. He went on to allude to the term Black Republicans, which had been used.

Mr. YULEE said the Republican name having been conferred by the Fathers of the country, a sectional party had not the right to appropriate it without some qualification. He would not call them "Black," but would leave it to themselves to supply the designation.

Mr. TRUMBULL replied they call themselves Republicans because they advocate the principles of JEFFERSON. If his party had made any departure from those principles he would condemn such departure. The fathers of the old Republican Party were their models, from whom their principles were taken. The same stands in their platform, to which the Senator from Florida objected, were written by the hand of JEFFERSON.

Mr. YULEE—To create and not destroy free governments.

Mr. TRUMBULL—Yes; and we perpetuate free governments by maintaining the principles we advocate. The other party call themselves Democrats, when their foundation is all shaped for the interests of the slaveholding aristocracy, comprising only one out of sixty of the inhabitants of the United States.

Mr. CLAY, of Alabama, (Dem.)—Do you recognize the right to reclaim fugitive slaves in the Territories?

Mr. TRUMBULL—I do, under the act of Congress, but not under the Fugitive Slave law, unless it is made applicable.

Mr. CLAY—How do you reconcile the obligation in your platform to give all men freedom, with the contradicting right to reclaim fugitive slaves?

Mr. TRUMBULL—That obligation is merely a repetition of the doctrine enunciated in the Declaration of Independence. Our fathers did not undertake to carry out their principles perfectly, as every Government is an establishment more or less upon the natural principles. They were men who had fled from the oppression of the Old World, and enunciated the general principles of carrying them out as far as circumstances permitted.

Mr. CLAY—Explain how you can reconcile, as consistent with the personal integrity of the framers of the Declaration of Independence and the Federal Constitution, in holding them as slaves, retaining them as property, and claiming them by their last will and testament among their descendants, with the declaration that all men are entitled to life and liberty.

Mr. TRUMBULL—Under the circumstances they did not regard it as a crime to hold slaves.

Mr. CLAY—Are there any circumstances under which crime can be justified, excused or tolerated?

Mr. TRUMBULL—I don't call it a crime in the citizens of the South to hold slaves.

Mr. CLAY—Is Polygamy a crime? Your platform classes Slavery and Polygamy together.

Mr. TRUMBULL—It is a crime under some circumstances. I take it that it is not a crime in Turkey.

Mr. CLAY, (interrupting)—I thank you for that concession in this Christian country.

Mr. TRUMBULL—We regard it as a crime, but other nations don't regard it so. I don't regard holding slaves as a crime, as they are often held in the Southern States. I think it is a wrong; but it is better to endure a wrong than undertake to right it by a greater crime and greater evil.

Mr. CLAY—Then I understand him that right and wrong are merely conventional, and depend on the laws and moral sentiment of society.

Mr. TRUMBULL—Not entirely, although many things are criminal or innocent, according to circumstances. When we speak of crime we mean violation of the laws of the land. There were no laws against polygamy in Turkey or against Slavery in the South. This thing of holding persons in slavery depends on the circumstances of the people who have slaves. I hold it as an evil, but in my judgment it is not a crime in every instance. I have never so regarded it. I do not believe Slavery illegal in the District of Columbia.

Mr. PUGH, of Ohio, (Dem.,) asked if he spoke for his party or for himself alone.

Mr. TRUMBULL said he spoke for himself, and explained the principles of the Republican Party as understood by the people of the Northwest, who are a conservative, Union-loving and law-abiding people.

Mr. PUGH asked if Mr. CHASE, of Ohio, was an exponent of the principles of the Republican Party.

Mr. TRUMBULL replied that the platform was the only authorized source whence to decide their principles. There might be as much difference between the sentiments of different Republicans on some points, as between Mr. PUGH and the rest of the Democratic party on the question of Squatter Sovereignty, although he did not think there was. This was the creed of thirteen hundred thousand men, and no doubt some difference existed in their opinions on certain points. He maintained that neither Congress nor the Territorial Legislature had power to create Slavery in a Territory, and took strong ground in favor of colonizing, under the fostering care of the Government, the free colored population of the United States, and those who may hereafter become free by the voluntary act of States or individuals, on some place or territory not too remote, until they shall become enabled to form a Government for themselves. He expressed the wish that this should become the settled policy of the Republican Party. He read from the writings of JEFFERSON and a speech of HENRY CLAY, bearing on that subject.

Mr. DAVIS, of Mississippi, (Dem.,) referred to the fact that Mr. TRUMBULL had not only introduced an amendment to embarrass the resolution, but made a long speech on the general subject of Slavery at the time when the importance of speedy action was apparent to everybody. Mr. TRUMBULL complains that the President did not send the information he wanted; but why did he not call for it again? It is not true that a large number of arms were taken at Liberty or that a large number of them were kept. Only enough were taken to arm about one hundred men and three light pieces of field artillery. They were not kept two weeks, and when they were returned the whole amount of expense for repairs and losses was only $400. This is the transaction held up as a parallel to the recent foray into the State of Virginia. The Senator had said more lives were lost in consequence of taking the arsenal at Liberty than at Harper's Ferry. He did not know as these arms were ever used. The Department had no information that they were. They were taken for the purpose of preserving order and to harm no one. Neither had any one engaged in that transaction been rewarded with a Federal office on account of the part he took therein. It was becoming in the Governor of Pennsylvania to offer assistance to the Governor of Virginia, and equally becoming in Mr. WISE to decline it.

Mr. MASON, of Virginia, (Dem.)—There was no offer made, and, of course, it could not have been declined.

Mr. DAVIS—I saw it so stated in the newspapers.

Mr. BIGLER, of Pennsylvania, (Dem.,) said GOV. WISE addressed the Governor of Pennsylvania on the subject, but the letter was not received in time for a prompt reply. That reply was all that could be desired by Virginia, showing that no countenance would be given by Pennsylvania to any encroachments on the rights of a sister State.

Mr. MASON stated that GOV. WISE's letter to the Governors of Ohio and Pennsylvania called for no aid whatever, but mentioned that he had information that combinations of armed men were forming in those States for the purpose of making an incursion into Virginia, either to rescue BROWN or to secure hostages in his place. Whether those combinations were really formed or not, Mr. MASON did not know.

Mr. DAVIS could see nothing humiliating in the Governor of Virginia calling on the Governors of Ohio and Pennsylvania to take care of lawless men within their limits. He believed that a conspiracy had been formed extending not only through the United States but England. Money had been contributed and a military leader sent here from England to take command. The insurrection was foretold in England long before it occurred here. FORBES received his first funds in England, and expected further aid here, but when it was not forthcoming he denounced his associates. The most odious feature in the whole transaction was that we find lurking a sordid commercial purpose to disturb industry in the South and raise the price of cotton.

Mr. MASON appealed to both sides of the Senate to let a vote be taken without further debate. If the amendment should be adopted he would wash his hands of the whole matter, being satisfied that it could result in no good.

Mr. WILSON, of Mass., (Rep.,) said some remarks made the other day demanded a reply, but he had no wish to embarrass the investigation. He saw no particular emergency requiring haste. Cotton and negroes commanded a good price, and this was an evident attempt to get up a panic and excitement for the purpose of calling out gentlemen at the North, of the Fifth avenue stripe, who have long purses, and make large contributions. He proceeded to reply to Mr. IVERSON's remarks respecting public sentiment in the North, and declared that freedom of speech did not exist in the South, alluding to several cases where people had been expelled or mobbed for expressing obnoxious sentiments. During his remarks a colloquy occurred, in which Mr. IVERSON said they would tar and feather every one in the South who preached sedition. [Applause in the galleries.]

Messrs. BROWN, of Mississippi, (Dem.,) and BRAGG, of North Caroline, (Dem.,) participated in the colloquy.

Mr. WILSON had no defence to make of the action of the Massachusetts Senate, and spoke in severe terms of GOV. WISE, whose whole life, he said, had been one of agitation. He believed that an investigation would show that he (Wise) and his confederates had formed a plan, in case FREMONT was elected President, to seize the City of Washington and Harper's Ferry, the very act for which he has hung BROWN. He alluded to the New-York Herald as furnishing brains for the Democratic Party, and containing materials from which editorials were rehashed in Washington.

Mr. JOHNSON, of Tennessee, (Dem.,) obtained the floor, but the hour being late, the Senate then adjourned till Monday.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The House was opened with prayer.

Mr. DAVIS, of Mississippi, (Dem.,) rose to make a speech.

A running discussion ensued on the pending proposition whether it was relevant to make speeches, as the previous question had heretofore been demanded and seconded, to cut off discussion on Mr. CLARK's resolution, and Mr. GILMER's substitute.

The Clerk subsequently rose to put the question, as had been proposed, whether it was competent for him to decide questions of order, pending the election of a Speaker.

Mr. MILLSON, of Virginia, (Dem.,) objected to a private citizen, elected by a former House as its subordinate officer, presiding over this body.

Mr. GROW, of Pennsylvania, (Rep.,) agreed with Mr. MILLSON, and would not favor a violation of the express law of Congress.

Mr. MAYNARD, of Tennessee, (Op.,) differed from both these gentlemen.

The points of order were then withdrawn.

Mr. DAVIS, of Mississippi, was in favor of a continuation of harmony. He believed the Government wanted saving. He was not a Democrat per se, and would make as many sacrifices as any man to preserve the Union. But notwithstanding his devotion to the Union, there are evils greater than the Union itself. He insisted on a strict observance of the Constitution in order to secure every section of the country its just equality and rights. It was the duty of all conservative and patriotic men to rally to the support of the Democracy, the only national party, to put down the Abolition spirit. There was, notwithstanding what had been said to the contrary, great cause of alarm to the country. We should act instantly, or it will be altogether too late. He quoted from the speeches of Mr. SEWARD to show that dangerous sentiments were avowed to distract the country, and accomplish the overthrow of the South. To say that the labor of the two sections was conflicting and irreconcilable, was a declaration of war, and hence the South were alarmed, and look to their defence. He earnestly appealed to all patriots to put down treasonable designs. In alluding to remarks heretofore made by Republicans, he said that armed men had been sent to the South to kill their people, and deprive them of their property. Could the South be patient under these circumstances, and could they be blamed for taking means for their defence? We of the South want peace. Let the North stand by the compact of our fathers. He said SEWARD is a traitor and deserves the gallows. [Applause on the Southern side.] Virginia has hung the traitor BROWN, and if they get hold of SEWARD they will hang him. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. MORRIS, of Pennsylvania, (Independent) said that, occupying a perfectly independent position, he was at liberty to vote on all questions according to his sense of duty to his country. He was opposed to all unnecessary agitation of the subject of Slavery, and did not wish to discuss it unless it came before them in a legitimate way. This wicked Administration countenanced every act of violence and fraud on the people of Kansas, and brought into Congress a Constitution fraudulent from the beginning to the end, and which would not stand the test of examination. His friend (Mr. SHERMAN) here stood nobly firm for the rights of the people against the Government, standing up for law, order, concord and peace, and for this the gentleman should have his vote so long as there was any probability of his election. He knew the gentleman was a friend to protection of domestic industry, and would so organize the Committees as would secure the fair consideration of the question. He was a man of just temper and mind, and incapable of perverting the rules into an instrument of despotism. An objection has been urged that Mr. SHERMAN signed the recommendation of HELPER's book. He (MORRIS) did not sign nor had he read the book. So far as he understood, it was written by a native of a Southern State. It was almost exclusively addressed to Southern men, and showed the experience of Southern men as to the value of Southern labor. Gentlemen magnify the book and make it a formidable engine of mischief to the peace of this country. Had not his friend declared that he was against that book, so far as it contemplated an infringement on the constitutional rights of the South? What had the House to do with HELPER's book? Were they as a college of Jesuits to expunge the literature of the book; and were they to act as censors of every incendiary work? It was a most extraordinary proceeding, and lifted HELPER into a consequence he never dreamed of obtaining. Who repealed the Missouri Compromise, and broke the bonds of peace? The Democratic Party. Who got up the Kansas-Nebraska bill? The Democratic Party. Who refused to carry out the provisions of the Kansas bill, deluding Kansas by saying she should have a free expression of her will, and then denying it? The Democratic Party. Who brought the Slavery question here? The Democratic Party. And yet gentlemen were to sit in this Hall and hear the whole North accused of acts of conspiracy against the Southern States. Was it fair, was it honorable and fair-dealing that the proceedings of small bodies in the North should be taken as indices of all those living in that section? His constituents were eminently loyal, and he insisted they should not be made participes criminis, and it was libel and calumny to hold them and the North responsible for the actions of a band of bad men. It might as reasonably be charged that the whole South was responsible for the ordinance passed by South Carolina, nullifying the laws of the United States, and providing for armed resistance. The man who was then President was a citizen of Tennessee, and he, in dealing with that subject, met a response not only from the East and West, but from the South. The proceedings of the Nashville Convention, too, fell dead on the loyal heart of the South. He would never despair of making the Constitution and the Union perpetual, and hoped that they would all live together as a band of brothers. But they never could live peaceably as long as gentlemen come into this House and insist on misrepresentations, and involve innocent people in the acts of criminals.

Mr. MOORE, of Alabama, (Dem.,) in reply to Mr. MORRIS, said that such a charge as the gentleman mentioned had never been made by the South on the entire people of the North. He knew there were men in the North as true to the Constitution as in the South. But when it was said that in the North there was no sympathy for JOHN BROWN, it was a libel. The papers of the North were full of demonstrations of sympathy, and some were in mourning for BROWN. Mr. GREELEY, a prominent organ of the Republican Party, said in his paper, that in future time BROWN's name will be held in glory and honor. So far as he knew the sentiments of those he represented, he but expressed his deliberate conviction when he said that the success of a purely sectional party would virtually be a dissolution of the Union. If the Republican Party could be defeated, the Union would be preserved. But if such a party were to succeed, the sooner the Union is dissolved the better. The South were on the defensive, and if they could not get their rights in the Union, and under the Constitution, they were prepared to have their rights out of it.

Mr. CORWIN, of Ohio, (Republican,) suggested that the House should take the course resorted to in the House when the New-Jersey Contested Election case prevented prompt organization. On that occasion the venerable JOHN QUINCY ADAMS was elected as Chairman until a Speaker was elected. It had been his fortune to witness here every one of the crises to which reference had been made in the debate. He was here during the nullification times and in 1850. If gentlemen could now summon to their aid the calm and wise course which animated gentlemen in those times, all unpleasant feelings would be removed. [Applause.] He had heard with infinite pain the repeated threats that, if the Republican Party were successful in the Presidential election the South would be willing to encounter the fatal consequences of a dissolution of the Union.

Mr. LAMAR, of Mississippi, (Democrat)—Did not Ex-President FILLMORE make that very threat.

Mr. CORWIN replied that he dared say that such an assertion was made prior to Mr. FILLMORE's election as Vice-President. He did express, in a formal manner, every opinion held by the Republican Party at this day; but it was found, when he succeeded to the Presidency, that he so administered the Government as to secure the approbation of every conservative man North and South for his impartiality. So would it happen to every man who comes into the Presidency. No matter what speculations he may have previously expressed, he will execute his constitutional powers. He did not think it fair to judge the Republican Party by what Mr. SEWARD or any other man has said. He had never read the speech of that Senator which was so repeatedly quoted from. There were hundreds of thousands of men who vote with the Republicans who had never read it, for there were men in that party who do not consider themselves worshippers of any idol. As to the charge that Mr. SEWARD was implicated in the conduct of JOHN BROWN, Mr. CORWIN said no man could be convicted on such questionable testimony as was sought to be produced. He thought that this mode of criminating men ought to be put away. He doubted not if they would trace the history of our country they would all find something they would be willing to forget. If every man would examine himself, he would find something to regret, and it is so of parties and Governments. In the course of his remarks, he said the principles of the Republicans were those of the framers of our Constitution, and for this he held himself responsible, but only as a lawyer. [Laughter.] He differed from some men who voted with that party. As to HELPER's book, he did not think it would change the opinion of a single man, woman or child on the face of the earth.

Mr. SEARLES of Ohio, (Rep.,) here explained, that when certain members signed their names, recommending the circulation of the book so often referred to, its compilation was not completed. It was to be made up of statistics from HELPER's book and quotations from the fathers of the Republic. The superintendence of the book was in the hands of gentlemen in whom they had confidence.

Mr. CORWIN resumed, and in the course of his remarks said that the South were entitled to a good law relative to fugitives, and such was his belief concerning the people of Ohio. His speech was somewhat discursive, and much that he said kept the House in exceeding good humor. He thought there was no occasion to quarrel.

Mr. COX, of Ohio, (Dem.,) argued that the doctrines of the Republicans of Ohio were subversive of the Constitution. Cut off the Western Reserve and it would be as strongly Democratic as any State in the Union. He said that Mr. CHASE was supporting men and a platform which had no affinity with the Fugitive Slave law, the perpetuity of the Union, or the sanctity of the Federal compact. He asked Mr. RANKIN whether he believed in the constitutionality of the Fugitive Slave law.

Mr. RANKIN, of Ohio, (Rep.,) declined, as he did the other day, to reply to any interrogatories, and referred to his public record for the last four years. He did not expect the support of gentlemen on that side of the House. [Applause.]

Mr. COX said that Mr. SHERMAN had an opportunity to manifest his love for the Free States when the Oregon bill came up, but he went out of the door so fast that you might have sat on his coat tail. [Laughter.]

Mr. SHERMAN said he was engaged with a Special Committee at the time.

Mr. COX replied that all the members of the Special Committee, with the exception of Mr. SHERMAN, voted, and concluded by exposing what he called the mosaic of the Republican Party in Ohio.

Adjourned.

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

NEW-YORK BOARD OF CURRENCY.—HON. GEO. OPDYKE presided at the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Currency, which was held on Tuesday evening in the Mercantile Library Room. Mr. JOHN V. YAPMAN presented to the Board two Colonial notes, of two dollars each, of the currency issued to circulate as Money in the Colony of Maryland, prior to the Revolution. He also presented a copy of a letter relative to the Currency, written by Gen. WASHINGTON. A discussion followed on the theories which are promulgated by some writers, that the movements of paper money and bank debts are to be classed with the operations of the credit system, and do not belong to the practical working of the great measure of prices. Mr. OPDYKE remarked that such theories arose from a superficial examination of the phenomena of wealth. Mr. LYMAN concurred in this opinion, and Mr. J. SMITH HOMANS alluded to the circulation of small gold coins, as a measure tending to promote the soundness of the currency through the increase of the precious metals in the hands of the people, and to the effort which is about to be made in England in this direction, by means of small gold coins. Mr. LYMAN remarked that our gold dollar had proved a failure; it is too small to be popular for general circulation. It should have been made annular, so that the pieces could have been kept in quantity upon strings. A gold coin made in this way would be of general utility, and popular with the people. After the great increase of paper currency among the European nations had been referred to, Mr. LYMAN referred to the destination of the gold exported from this country, as a matter for inquiry. The Chairman and Messrs. HOMANS, LYMAN and YAPMAN, joined in the discussion. The general conclusion was, that the great volume of gold is going to the Continent of Europe, and displacing silver for Asia. Allusion was made to a growing demand for silver coin for export, in this country; to the production of silver in Arizona and California; the great abundance of quicksilver in California; the supply of foreign coin brought in by European immigrants, and the increased consumption of gold in the arts. The increase of gold, it was generally concluded, is not having as great an influence upon prices, from increase of the currency, as had been predicted in some quarters.

THE HIGH BRIDGE OVER THE CROTON RIVER TO BE REPLACED.—The Special Committee of the Westchester Board of Supervisors, to whom was submitted the petition of A. K. ROTHMAN and others, praying for a new High Bridge across the CrotonRiver in place of the High Bridge, submitted their report on the 29th ult. They found on examination that the southerly wing of the easterly abutment of the bridge had disappeared, leaving a huge gap directly in front of one side of it, rendering one-half of the bridge entirely impassable. They also found that the abutment lately built had split from the bottom to the top. For the following reasons they deemed it best to comply with the prayer of the petitioners: First—Because it will cost a large sum of money to repair and keep in repair the present bridge, which will be saved if a new one is built. Second—A dangerous road will be entirely avoided, and dangerous accidents prevented. Third—A direct road, connecting with the new bridge, will bring the villages of Sing Sing and Croton into close connection, greatly to the comfort and convenience of the inhabitants of those localities. Resolutions were adopted directing that the sum of $4,000 should be assessed upon the County of Westchester to meet the expense of the structure, and if this were not sufficient that the people of the towns of Ossining and Cortlandt should raise the balance by subscription or otherwise. The report and resolutions were adopted.

KAPPNER'S CHESS TOURNAY.—The Chess tournament now in progress at the Morphy Chess and Billiard-rooms, corner of Broadway and Fourth-street, where the match between MORPHY and THOMPSON was played last Summer, will not be completed in less than a month. It was commenced last Monday. The match is between thirty-two players, whose names—an incorrect list of which has appeared in other papers—are given below, in the order in which the players are pitted against each other:

Stanley vs. Johnston.	O'Neil vs. Ballantine.
Rullen vs. Paterson.	Taber vs. Delmar.
Arth. Napoleon vs. Harned.	Michaelis vs. Mark.
Brisbane vs. Haseltine.	Leonard vs. Lecour.
Brannigan vs. Doyle.	Isaacs vs. J. K. Doolittle.
Mildeberger vs. McLean.	Ottolengin vs. Kerstecdt.
A. Doolittle vs. Caldwell.	Heilbuth vs. Higgins.
Blum vs. McRae.	Knox vs. O'Connor.

By the terms of the match, the opponent of each player is selected by drawing lots, and the tournament is divided into five sections, in the first of which the thirty-two are matched in sixteen separate games; then in the second section the sixteen winners of two games in the first are matched: in the third, the number of players, chosen by the same standard, is narrowed down to eight; in the fourth, to four; and in the fifth, to two. He who wins three games in the last section becomes entitled to the prize offered by the proprietors of the chessrooms, Messrs. KAPPNER & KLATZL—a pretty set of chessmen of boxwood and ebony and a board of rosewood and satinwood, which are on exhibition at the rooms. The contestants will play every day and evening till the match is decided.

MORE PHYSICIANS FOR THE FLOATING HOSPITAL.—The Quarantine Commissioners have appointed Mr. WM. H. THOMSON an assistant-physician to Dr. HARRIS, on board the Floating Hospital lying off Quarantine. The physicians' salaries now to be paid by the Commissioners of Emigration for the Quarantine Hospitals, amount to about $12,200 per annum. There are, at present, five persons reported sick on board. The Commissioners have also to pay for similar services at Blackwell's and Ward's Island.

FAIR OF THE J. T. HOPPER HOME.—A Fair and entertainment, for the benefit of the Women's Home for discharged female prisoners, was opened on Thursday evening, at Clinton Hall, in Astor-place, and will continue, day and evening, until Saturday.

SUDDEN DEATH.—WM. B. MCNEILL died suddenly yesterday morning while sitting in the ferry-house foot of Twenty-third-street, East River. His body was conveyed to the Bellevue Hospital, where an inquest by Coroner SCHIRMER revealed the fact that death was caused by disease of the heart.

FALL FROM ALOFT.—JAMES STEPHENSON, a seaman, at work aloft on board of the ship Underwriter, at Pier No. 45, East River, yesterday fell from the topgallant-yard to the deck, and sustained severe injuries. He was carried to the New-York Hospital.

Police Intelligence.

ILLEGAL VOTING.

Justice STEERS, at the Essex Market Police Court, had several persons before him charged with illegal voting at the Municipal election. Charles Harrison, a sailor in the United States Navy, and belonging to the North Carolina, having rowed one of the officers across the river, was requested to vote in the Tenth District, and was informed that he had a right to do so. On attempting to cast his ballot he was arrested and fully committed to answer in default of $500 bail. Daniel Weeks, a seaman, residing in the Eleventh District of the Seventh Ward, who has voted for the last seven or eight years, had his vote challenged, whereupon he produced his "Protection," certifying that he was a citizen. This he regarded as sufficient. The Chairman of the Board of Inspectors concurred. Weeks from any criminal intent, and he was admitted to bail. John M. Brown, who was charged with stuffing a ballot-box in the Fourteenth Ward, after a full investigation was honorably discharged.

CITY GOVERNMENT.

THE BOARD OF COUNCILMEN.

ELECTION OF FIRE DEPARTMENT ENGINEERS—CITY EXPENDITURES.

In the Board of Councilmen last evening, the report of the Committee on Fire Department, with an ordinance providing for the election of an additional Assistant Engineer for the Fire Department, and rules and regulations for conducting future elections for Chief and Assistant Engineers, was called up and made special order for next Monday night.

A communication was received from the Comptroller, giving a summary of expenditures on City account, and also upon the several Trust and Special accounts from Jan. 1, 1859 to Nov. 30th ult., amounting in the aggregate to $10,262,206 44. After the transaction of some routine business, the Board adjourned to Monday next.

CITY CANVASSERS.

The Board of Aldermen organized as a Board of City Canvassers at 12 M., yesterday. Alderman BOOTH was appointed Chairman. The Board sat till 5 P. M. The returns from the Eleventh Aldermanic District, (Twentieth Ward,) with the exception of the vote for school officers in the Sixth District, and from the Seventeenth Aldermanic District (Twelfth Ward) were canvassed, and the returns from the Fourteenth Aldermanic District (Eighteenth Ward) were taken up. The Board adjourned to 10 A. M., to-day.

BROOKLYN FERRY FARES.

Messrs. BOOLE, STARR and DAUGHTY, the Committee of New-York Aldermen, had an informal meeting with Aldermen DAYTON, TAYLOR and GERRY, of Brooklyn, yesterday, to confer on the proposed reduction of ferry fares between this City and Brooklyn. Nothing could be done, however, as the services of the New-York Aldermen were required in the Board of Canvassers.

Routes of Oriental Commerce.

LECTURE BY CAPT. W. F. LYNCH BEFORE THE KANE MONUMENT ASSOCIATION.

At the Cooper Institute, last evening, an audience not numerous but attentive, listened to the second lecture in the course before the Kane Monument Association, delivered by Capt. W. F. LYNCH U. S. N.

The lecturer commenced by noting the gradual discovery of the science of navigation and the development of the wealth of the East, whose commerce has been the bone of contention of all nations from the time of the Arabian caravan, spoken of in Genesis as coming from Judea, to the present day, when no less than two steamships, longer than the renowned Great Eastern, have been built at Liverpool for the Oriental Steamship Company, whose annual revenue is $7,500,000. He detailed the various routes taken by Phœnicians, without whose commerce the literature of Greece would probably have never been spread over the world; by ALEXANDER, in excavating the canal from the Red Sea to the banks of the Nile, for the purpose of taking goods to Alexandria wholly by water; by the Persians, through the Euphrates to the Caspian Sea; by the Romans, through Mesopotamia, Syria and Palestine to the Eastern parts of the Mediterranean; by Solomon, in founding Palmyra, the city in the desert; and by Hippolytus, the commander of an Egyptian vessel, who allowed himself to be swept across the Arabian sea by the "monsoons," striking the west coast of India. He dilated upon the commercial importance of China, and the struggles between England and Russia to secure that vast and valuable trade. Our sympathies should be with England, for her liberality in allowing others to participate in the benefits of her commercial treaties, but the extension in that quarter of the world should at the same time be spurned on. He enlarged upon the untold wealth and all-powerful commercial importance of India as well as of China, and noticed on passing the significant fact that before long the route to the Pacific, from the Atlantic ports, might be through the Missouri River, and the new Washington to the Columbia River, (thus bringing us perhaps in closer communication with China than by any other route.) How long would it be before commerce would ascend the great streams of China instead of descending them? While noticing the new telegraphic enterprise from Aden across the Red Sea, and the projected railroad facilities for reaching India, he asked why there could not be explored a direct route from Jaffa, in the Mediterranean, to Grande, on the Persian Gulf? Why should we stop for England to fight France on the Egyptian Canal, or France fight England on a Syrian railway? Commerce might come either through the valley of the Euphrates, by the way of the Valley el Ahebek, or directly from the Persian Gulf to the southeast of the Dead Sea. He had heard of the probability of Georgia pine supplying the place of the cedars of Lebanon, of the fact of an American omnibus running in the streets of Beyrout, of the improving aspect of affairs at Jerusalem, of the increasing commercial importance of Jaffa. Why should not Palestine, the centre of Europe, Asia and Africa, be the commercial centre of the world, the part of a route to India, and the commercial necessity for those ends be the means of the fulfillment of God's prophecy in Isaiah—for the restoration of the Jews?

BROOKLYN INTELLIGENCE.

BOAT SWAMPED—ONE MAN DROWNED.—Between 8 and 9 o'clock yesterday morning, a small row-boat, containing a Sergeant and seven Privates of the United States Army, and two boatmen, named SHERMAN, (brothers,) was swamped in the East River at the foot of Warren-street. The crew of a French schooner lying at WOESNEFF & ROBINSON's wharf, put off to assist the drowning men, and succeeded in rescuing all but one of the SHERMANS, who sank before he could be reached. The soldiers were a portion of a detachment just arrived from Boston, and were on their way to Governor's Island, when the accident occurred.

THE KNIFE.—JAMES WALLACE, on Wednesday night, while under the influence of liquor, commenced beating his wife. Her brother interfered, and WALLACE drew a knife and stabbed both parties severely, but not fatally. He was arrested yesterday and committed for trial. WILLIAM HAYES was also arrested in the same District, and committed, for stabbing EDWARD FARRELL.

YOUTHFUL THIEVES.—The Police of the Second Precinct, on Wednesday night, arrested a party of ten youthful thieves, whose ages range from 11 to 14 years. Yesterday they were brought before Justice CORNWELL, when the leaders of the gang were sent to the House of Industry, and the others were discharged, with a reprimand.

RE-ARRESTED.—FREDERICK MILLER, arrested several weeks ago, for passing counterfeit money, and who subsequently made his escape, was recaptured yesterday and committed for examination.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—ARCHIBALD GRAHAM, 70 years of age, late on Wednesday night was instantly killed by falling down a flight of stairs, at his residence, in Adelphi street, near Atlantic avenue.

Wallack's Theatre.

A very amusing Comedy in three acts, called "Everybody's Friend," was produced here, Wednesday night, with complete success. It is by STANLEY COVEN, a gentleman who has contributed largely to the public's stock of amusement. Plot is not the specialty of the piece; indeed, it would be difficult to find a work of similar length with so little of it. Each act seems to be complete in itself, and might, without any very serious consequences, be detached from the rest. This is not a recommendation, but as a defect it is entirely covered by the genuine humor and brilliancy of the dialogue. It does not often happen that a piece so thoroughly lively and enjoyable, can be witnessed at the theatre. From the rising of the curtain to the fall thereof, the audience is kept in a thorough state of hearty enjoyment. The characters are contrasted with much skill, and the incidents are all of a nature to bring forth their strongest eccentricities. Mr. Felix Feathery is the universal friend—a married man, but devoted to the interests of every one except his wife. To win him from this too generous disposition, Mrs. Felix Feathery contrives a little plot, and the operation of this and the illustration of the gentleman's good-natured difficulties constitutes the whole of the comedy. The hero and his wife are, of course, the principal characters; they are presented in the best possible manner by Mr. LESTER WALLACK and Mrs. HOEY, who are unequaled in this sort of comedy. There is a modest man too played by Mr. BAUCCICIS with much humor; and a little major by Mr. WALCOT. Miss MARY GAYTON and Mrs. FLOYD are also in the cast, and contribute notably to the general completeness. We have never seen a better acted piece, even at this theatre, where elegance and completeness always go hand in hand; there was not the slightest hitch or clumsiness in the entire piece. Its success was unquestionable; the artists were called out twice at the end, and Mr. LESTER WALLACK announced the piece for performance every night until further notice.

The Death of Nana Sahib not Confirmed.

The Royal Mail steamship Persia, Capt. JONES, which sailed from Liverpool at 6:30 on the morning of the 26th ult., arrived at this port yesterday morning.

The Nova Scotian, from Quebec, arrived at her dock at the Mersey at 8 A. M. on the 25th, but did not reach Liverpool until twenty-four hours later, on account of the dense fog which prevailed.

The Arago arrived at Southampton on the morning of the 25th.

New postal arrangements have been made between the British Government and the Canadian line of steamers, and, commencing with the next sailing, leaving Liverpool on the 24th November, the vessels are to call at Queenstown to land and receive mails.

The Jason arrived at Antwerp on the evening of the 26th November.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The Proposed Disarmament—The Mission of Lord Cowley—The Volunteer Movement—New School of Oxford, &c.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 25, 1859.

There is no truth whatever in a statement which has been in circulation for the last two days, both here and in Paris, that the Emperor Napoleon had proposed a mutual disarmament on the part of England and France. No proposition to that effect has ever been made. This I have on the highest authority.

The Italian question (as far the fate of the Italians is concerned) is virtually settled.

France has agreed to acquiesce in the decision, should Congress determine to leave them undisturbed in the choice of their future rulers, provided this constitution should be monarchical. England on the other hand, consents that the Legations should be restored to the Holy See. It is believed, however, by those who know best the spirit that now animates the people of this portion of the Pontifical States, they will not be induced peaceably to return to the allegiance of Pope Pius IX. Failure's counsel to them is to fortify their towns; and GARIBALDI's proclamation on retiring from the command of the volunteer army, plainly indicates his resolve to appear again amongst them in the Spring. The conviction, however, is general, in well-informed circles, that Tuscany, Modena and Parma will eventually be united with Piedmont.

Lord COWLEY has been to arrange preliminaries for the Congress. If it be true that the main points to be decided by that assemblage of diplomatists have already been agreed to by which twenty years ago took its rise in that nucleus of learning. German criticism and the odium of the exact sciences at home, has begun to fall upon the older and younger scholars of the University. A series of works have appeared from the pen of Rev. Baden Powell, Professor of Chemistry at Oxford, tending to shake the established faith in the literal inspiration of Scripture.

A still more powerful and influential teacher of the new school is Rev. Mr. Jowett, professor of Greek, [illegible] on the writings of St. Paul for throwing the fetters of both the Puseyite and the [illegible] the latter, Dr. Gorham, not long ago called upon the Vice-Chancellor to admonish Dr. Jowett before him, as the statutes authorize him to do, in order that he might require him to renew his subscription of the Thirty-nine Articles. The Professor attended; Dr. Gorham was there, and sought to bring about a conversation on the subject of their interview. But the Vice-Chancellor [illegible] by persistently talking about the weather, and as soon as he had signed the list he took his leave.

The greatest attraction of all has been excited by the publication of Rev. Dr. Mansel's course of sermons, delivered by him as Bampton Lecturer for the year. In them the preacher, who is as eloquent as well as most exemplary man, lays down broadly that the province of the Reason is beyond our faculty to comprehend; and that literal interpretation is the mere audacity of ignorance and vanity.

MISCELLANEOUS ENGLISH NEWS.

Lord Cowley, the British Ambassador to France, had arrived in London, and it was reported that his mission was to lay before the English Government a proposal from the French Government for a simultaneous withdrawal by England and France. Another report is that he was summoned to receive final instructions from the British Cabinet respecting the Congress.

A Cabinet Council had been held in London, and [illegible] had had an audience of the Queen at Windsor.

The English Government had decided upon making a considerable increase in the army by the formation of a second battalion to each of the regiments up to and including the Thirty-fifth, by which means an effective equivalent to eleven regiments will be obtained. The London Post says: This measure ought to excite no surprise when the small amount of the British army is compared with the extent of territory which it has to occupy, and the drafts necessary for India and China.

The steam-ship Norman, with the West India mails, had returned to Southampton. Fifty cases of yellow fever had occurred on board, ten of which proved fatal.

Mr. Barry, the American horse-tamer, was operating at Liverpool with great success.

John Mitchel, in a letter from Paris, regarding the agitation being made in Ireland to obtain an amnesty for himself and his fellow exiles, declares that he would accept no amnesty. He adds:

"I do not know whether my two friends and compatriots now in the United States would avail themselves of the 'amnesty,' if granted. For my part, I certainly would not. I hope indeed to go to Ireland again, but never by the Queen of England's good leave. It would be impossible for me to live there under her Government without endeavoring to overthrow it. I should instantly organize confederacy and combine with person and persons once more to dethrone the queen of our sacred Isle—the new Queen, her crown and dignity, and so forth; whereupon she would again pack a Jury of true-blue Castle Protestants, and I would get my bottom in the Post-office, again get [illegible] upon my track, (does the Baron still live?) and all the detectives and suborners, again [illegible] Sunday my children, under a [illegible] of law. Oh, no! I cannot go back to live in Ireland under her dominion, yet I hope to go back to live in Ireland."

THE BRITISH OCCUPATION OF PERIM.

From the London Times, Nov. 24.

The small island of Perim, distant ninety miles from the British settlement of Aden, at the entrance of the Red Sea, is undoubtedly in our possession. It has been in our possession more than once, and has more than once voluntarily evacuated, but it was last occupied in the month of January, 1857, under the orders of the Governor of Aden, with the view of making it the foundation for a lighthouse. It is occupied by from fifty to sixty persons, and this number includes only a single European, a young officer of the Bombay Artillery, who has about as pleasant a life of it as a light-keeper in a floating beacon. The rest of the party are detached from the Aden garrison, consisting of 25 sappers and 50 gunners. The sappers are occupied in keeping up the water tanks and [illegible] a very easy task—and the defence of the place devolves upon the gunners, who, however, have [illegible] We need hardly add that it is a pleasant thing for the neighbors of the enterprise to find it [illegible] like a settlement on the coasts of the Red Sea: Arabs on the one side and Africans on the other are always menacing aggression, and no position would afford us more security which was not proof against sudden attack. This protection, and this only, has been provided for the 50 men stationed on the isle of Perim. A small work has been formed of just sufficient size to contain this little garrison and its stores, and of just sufficient strength to resist the only weapons with which the probable assailants would be armed. It is musketry proof, and that is all. It is about as serviceable as a log-house or blockhouse, furnishing a very good shelter against native marauders, but nothing more. That is literally the whole story of the supposed fortifications and garrison. Beyond the work we have described there are no defences whatever. There is not, nor has there ever been, a single gun on the island. The great difficulty lies in keeping up the supply of provisions. Communications with Aden are maintained by a boat which plies every fourteen days between the two places, and which relieves ten or twelve men of the garrison on each occasion, the other men remained being released once a quarter. It is thought probable that the provisions on the rock should be sufficient for three months' consumption, and the water for twice that time, but so great is the trouble involved, and so serious is the risk of privation, that it has not only been determined to establish another means of supply. For this purpose a condensing engine and a number of coal wells to be dispatched from Aden and there, if they have arrived, are the only [illegible] of engineering which the island contains.

Having said this much of Perim and its garrison, we [illegible] to say something more, and perhaps some readers will not take our explanation any the less readily because it really contains a confession. We must needs acknowledge that, though Perim is neither a Malta nor a Rhodes, though it is not a citadel, not a fortress, not a stronghold, not a battery—though it is none of these things—yet neither is it what it ought to be—a proper lighthouse. We can, however, most truly affirm that this is the actual origin and destination of the settlement, and that, if the object has not been accomplished, it has been [illegible] to some official delays and vacillations [illegible] in such proceedings. It is [illegible] that Perim consults with Aden, Aden with Bombay, Bombay with Calcutta, and Calcutta with England. It did happen that, at first, the officer commanding Aden in direct communication with Perim had not been equal to [illegible] dispatches all related to the rock, and the Admiralty somehow got hold of the matter, and the proper form of the light and lighthouse to be erected between the Indian Ocean and Whitehall. This, of course, was not conducive to expedition, and, though the controversy was terminated at last, and an engineer dispatched from Bombay to complete the [illegible] plans some twelve months ago, the contemplated lighthouse has not been erected yet. To [illegible] we must stand guilty, but, if Perim office never suffer from similar delays, we can only say that our neighbors are truly fortunate in their administration.

THE ARCHIBALD ALISON ON THE NATIONAL DEFENCES.

On Wednesday evening, Nov. 24, a meeting called by the Sheriff of Lanark, was held in the City Hall, Glasgow, for the purpose of considering the best means of [illegible] the defences of the country. It is stated that at least 4,000 citizens were present, a number of volunteers in full uniform; and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed. Among the speakers was Sir Archibald Alison, who, in the course of his remarks, said: "There is one point which is often urged by the friends of this country—that we need not be afraid of the French, for we have a great mercantile navy of 200,000 men; but in the present state of matters this great mercantile navy is far from being a refuge or support. The wages in the mercantile navy average 50s. a month, while those in the Royal Navy are only 21s. The mercantile navy is [illegible] with the Royal Navy. Even in the militia there were 100,000 men less in February last than the House of Commons provided for. What is the cause of that? How comes it we get men in sufficient numbers to make up the militia roll? Simply because a soldier's pay is 1s. 1d. per day, while a man may earn 2s. 3d., or 5s. per day at his own trade. The maintenance of our empire in India is another source of anxiety—the keeping of so many millions in subjection requiring the presence of so many troops. We have for the last 15 years been harassed by the continual wars of conquest. In these years 3,000,000 persons have emigrated to the colonies or foreign countries, and the average has been about 250,000 per annum. This [illegible] to the proper standard. I would not [illegible] things unless I were able to point out a remedy. The first step towards it is to raise the pay of the soldiers and sailors and the militia from 1s. 1d. to 2s. 6d. or 1s. 8d. per day; and I would say that so long as we will find soldiers to fill the ranks and sailors to man the navy sufficient for any emergency in which we may be placed, it is necessary that we should have a great volunteer force in addition to our regular army. I believe that a volunteer force is made equal to none in discipline, and we have already shown how far public spirit [illegible] It is necessary that there should be a [illegible] organization. I hope the subject may be [illegible] and that the volunteer corps [illegible] Three counties, but the great matter is, [illegible] should be brought to bear upon [illegible] The points which as travellers [illegible] Supplies. We must, therefore, have [illegible]

[illegible] Government were so [illegible] that the Government [illegible] the French Press [illegible] the troubles, to moderate its tone [illegible] The crisis the climax of John Bull [illegible] self-consistency! The French Senate [illegible] been given to the French Press, and [illegible] scurvily if it were to be given, it would not be at the command of the London Times. But this is only the dénouement of the scheme the Times has laid, to give itself importance and to make itself talked about. To-day it calculates that all England is wondering at the manner in which the Times directs and controls the Government of France. The hold which it thus has upon the confidence and the respect of the English people is reinvigorated and strengthened. It needs from time to time one of these coups de théâtre in order to maintain its colossal reputation. But it requires no great penetration to see through this harlequinade of the Times, and once understood, it sinks to the level of a pitiable and feeble, but, nevertheless, wicked jugglery.

The sudden resignation of Garibaldi took every one by surprise, and his proclamation was the cause of a thousand surmises as to the exact character and locality of the "miserable and astute policy" to which he there refers. In France, people very naturally refer his complaints to Italy, as a locality, and to his quarrels with Gen. Fanti, as a cause; while in Italy they point to Paris as the locality, and to the "astute and miserable policy" of Napoleon as the cause. Which of the two opinions is correct I will not pretend to say, but perhaps both contributed their part to the general result. Beside these, it is said that his troops were deserting, on account of their inactivity, and that Mazzini, taking advantage of this circumstance, was renewing his intrigues, and in such a way that, if Garibaldi remained in command, he might be compromised in his present allegiance to Victor Emanuel and the cause of order. But there is still another reason, and that is, that the Dictator Farini, acting under the advice of the King, wished Garibaldi to remove his troops further from the Roman frontier, so as to avoid every shadow of a chance for a collision. Although Garibaldi has retired, for the moment, from the Army of the League, he obtains the rank of Lieut-general in the Piedmontese Army—the first time, I believe, in his life, he has ever held a commission in a regular army, and his influence will not be lost to the great cause of Italian independence.

It is a singular fact that the high personages who now surround the person of the Emperor of Austria are of French origin. Thus, M. Folliet de Crenneville replaces the Count de Gaisse as Aid-de-camp and companion of the young sovereign. The second Aid-de-camp is M. Bizot de St. Quentin. The Baron Huebner has been replaced in the Ministry of Police by M. Thierry. These new appointments, added to the especial favor shown to the young Prince de Metternich, Austrian Ambassador at Paris, induce people to believe in an alliance between the two countries for political purposes. But there are also reasons for the belief that no such alliance exists, and that the circumstances referred to are mere coincidences. Not long ago a Count O'Connell was the Aid-de-camp and companion of Francis Joseph, and not less than thirty-seven Irish and English names occur on the list of officers of the Austrian army. So, too, in the French army, there are O'Malleys, McMahons, Nells, O'Hares and Smiths.

M. Meissonier, the distinguished painter, is now terminating, at his chateau at Poissy, the picture which was commanded of him by the Emperor, of the battle of Solferino. M. Meissonier, who was present at the battle, intends to return again to the battle-field before allowing his picture to go before the public. It is said to be a work of great merit.

Mr. Seward, in company with the Count de Sarzens, was invited to Compiègne one day last week, and had a long interview with the Emperor. The Count, who believes firmly in the election of Mr. Seward at the next Presidential election, no doubt introduced the Senator to His Majesty as the prospective President; but since Mr. Douglas was thus introduced at St. Cloud five years ago, and then failed his election, His Majesty, perhaps, made a mental reservation this time. Nevertheless, Mr. Seward had every reason to be gratified with the distinguished manner in which he was received by the Emperor.

On Sunday last, the congregation of the American chapel in this city was thrown into an irrepressible smile by an extraordinary "bull" of the minister. Since the departure of Rev. Mr. Sheley to the United States, the congregation has been dependent upon volunteers, and last Sunday the pulpit was filled by an English clergyman who, no doubt, knew more about theology than about the Government of the United States. He announced, by request, that the following Thursday (to-day) would be observed in that Chapel as Thanksgiving Day, conformably to a custom in the United States, and he said that after the collection, he would read the Proclamation of the President of the United States, naming that day as a day of General Thanksgiving. When the time arrived, the good man commenced reading as follows: "Be it known that I, Edward D. Morgan, Governor of the State of New-York, do hereby appoint," etc. I have heard of certain members of the congregation who are laughing yet.

A gentleman from Newark, N. J., was yesterday arrested at the Hôtel du Louvre, and carried before the Prefect of Police, where he was examined two hours on the supposition that he was Mazzini in disguise.

THE ITALIAN QUESTION.

THE CONGRESS.

The Paris correspondent of the London Post says a decided difficulty had grown up in reference to the proposed Congress. The invitations had not been issued. Austria was said to be the cause of the delay.

"At the moment of going to press," says the Opinion Nationale of the evening of the 26th, "we learn that the invitation to the Congress has been forcibly postponed in consequence of a fresh demand on the part of England. That Power is said to require, 1st, That the decisions of Congress shall not be obligatory. 2d, That in the event of the dethroned Princes not being restored, the form of Government shall be clearly stipulated beforehand."

Another authority says (somewhat in contradiction of the above) that Prince Metternich had remitted to Count Walewski the letters from the Austrian Government addressed to the Foreign Powers, inviting them to take part in the Congress. These invitations were to be delivered at their respective destinations by the French couriers, conveying similar invitations from the French Government.

On the day when the ratifications were exchanged at Zurich, M. Azzano delivered to the Austrian Plenipotentiary a draft at sight for 20,000,000 florins. The remaining 80,000,000 are to be paid in four installments at short intervals.

It was reported that Count Rechberg, assisted by Prince Metternich, will represent Austria at the Congress.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times, in his latest letter, confirms the statement that the invitations to the Congress had been delayed, not from any difference between the English and French Cabinets, but rather owing to some difficulties started by Austria on the Regency question. The Vienna correspondent of the same journal says it was rumored in diplomatic circles there that there were still many and great difficulties to be removed before the Congress could meet.

The members of the French and Austrian Missions at Paris and Vienna had received decorations according to their rank from the respective Governments to which they are accredited, as also have the representatives at Zurich.

THE REGENCY OF THE CENTRAL STATES.

The Sardinian Government has addressed the following dispatch, on the subject of the Regency of Central Italy, to its diplomatic representatives at the Various Courts:

Turin, Nov. 15, 1859.

M. le Ministre: The assemblies of Central Italy, [illegible] the conclusions that the Government has communicated to the French Government [illegible] the troubles, to moderate its tone [illegible] This crisis the climax of John Bull [illegible] self-consistency! MISCELLANEOUS.

The number of deaths from cholera in the French army, during the twenty days' campaign against the frontier tribes of Morocco, was 2,100.

The French Government was forming large dépôts of coal, to provide against the inconveniences that might result in any future war, from coal being declared contraband of war.

The sailing-frigate La Vengeance had left for China, with 400 marines on board.

A Paris semi-official journal states that the communications between the French and English squadrons at Algesiras, continued to be most friendly. It was expected that the greater portion of the French vessels would soon return to Toulon.

Count Pourtales, the Prussian Ambassador at Paris, is said to have been instructed to give the French Government authentic explanations of the late interview between the Prince Regent of Prussia and the Emperor of Russia.

The Moniteur announces the appointment of the Marquis de Moustier as French Ambassador to Austria.

A pension of 12,000 francs had been accorded to the widow of Gen. Espinasse, who was killed in Italy.

Semi-official paragraphs had been dispatched to the provincial journals encouraging the impression that the Emperor had charged Lord Cowley to represent to her Britannic Majesty his willingness to promote a general disarmament in Europe.

The Paris Bourse was firm and tending upward. Rentes closed on the 25th at 70-20.

THE ITALIAN QUESTION.

THE CONGRESS.

The Paris correspondent of the London Post says a decided difficulty had grown up in reference to the proposed Congress. The invitations had not been issued. Austria was said to be the cause of the delay.

"At the moment of going to press," says the Opinion Nationale of the evening of the 26th, "we learn that the invitation to the Congress has been forcibly postponed in consequence of a fresh demand on the part of England. That Power is said to require, 1st, That the decisions of Congress shall not be obligatory. 2d, That in the event of the dethroned Princes not being restored, the form of Government shall be clearly stipulated beforehand."

Another authority says (somewhat in contradiction of the above) that Prince Metternich had remitted to Count Walewski the letters from the Austrian Government addressed to the Foreign Powers, inviting them to take part in the Congress. These invitations were to be delivered at their respective destinations by the French couriers, conveying similar invitations from the French Government.

On the day when the ratifications were exchanged at Zurich, M. Azzano delivered to the Austrian Plenipotentiary a draft at sight for 20,000,000 florins. The remaining 80,000,000 are to be paid in four installments at short intervals.

It was reported that Count Rechberg, assisted by Prince Metternich, will represent Austria at the Congress.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times, in his latest letter, confirms the statement that the invitations to the Congress had been delayed, not from any difference between the English and French Cabinets, but rather owing to some difficulties started by Austria on the Regency question. The Vienna correspondent of the same journal says it was rumored in diplomatic circles there that there were still many and great difficulties to be removed before the Congress could meet.

The members of the French and Austrian Missions at Paris and Vienna had received decorations according to their rank from the respective Governments to which they are accredited, as also have the representatives at Zurich.

THE REGENCY OF THE CENTRAL STATES.

The Sardinian Government has addressed the following dispatch, on the subject of the Regency of Central Italy, to its diplomatic representatives at the Various Courts:

Turin, Nov. 15, 1859.

M. le Ministre: The assemblies of Central Italy, [illegible]

[illegible] Congress.

Receive, &c.,

PRINCE CARIGNAN ON THE REGENCY.

The Florence Nazione publishes the following letter, addressed by the Prince of Carignan to the Commandeur Mayocco at Pisa:

Monsieur le Commandeur: I cannot find words sufficient to express to you my sincere gratitude for the letter you have been good enough to address to me. The vote of the Assemblies of Central Italy—a vote which I believe must be attributed to the affection of the Italians towards the King than to myself individually—was very agreeable to my feelings, though above my merits. Trust me, then, that the sacrifice I made, in preventing me from instantly discharging in person the honorable mission confided to me, is a very great one. I should have been happy to prove to the Italians my entire affection as well as the sincere gratitude I feel towards them; but, in spite of my wishes, that could not be effected. I have the satisfaction of believing that, on the eve of a European Congress, that sacrifice will be more useful to the Italians than my presence, as it is destined to efface all suspicion. * * * * * * * *

I comprehend all the difficulty of the situation of Central Italy, but we must not lose courage. We must, on the contrary, redouble our energy, be united and armed, and maintain that perfect order which has done so much honor to the Italians in these later times, and which, by challenging the admiration of the world, will doubtless be their most powerful support before the Congress. My reply to Commandeur Minghetti and M. Pasini must, I trust, have reassured the Italians. I have done all that I could, and you know that I am honest, and that I long for nothing in the world but to see Italy happy. Accept, &c., &c.

A REPUBLICAN VIEW.

LETTER OF M. MAZZINI TO BARON RICASOLI.

Sir: I have been informed that you have in your possession a letter of mine containing a plan of military operations in Perugia, which has given rise to persecutions and annoyance.

Were I to address myself solely to you in your character of Tuscan Minister, it might be sufficient to assure you that the letter in question concerns in no way the affairs of Tuscany; that it does not appeal in the least to the Tuscan functionaries; that it does not threaten either Government or people. But I prefer addressing myself to the patriot—to the man who loves to confer with his friends as I do with mine—of the unity of Italy as the only aim and end to be attained by the present movement. In proposing this movement I mean to indicate the only operation which not only can accomplish the object in view, but also of saving Tuscany from an inevitable restoration. You profess to know as certain fact (which is far from proved as yet) that King Victor accepts the fusion of Central Italy; and that the acceptation since the treaty of Villafranca is equivalent to a declaration of war you have too much perception not to behold. The revolution must be extended, or it is useless; localized it becomes powerless. Central Italy is lost if it does not at once fix its basis upon a foundation as sure and strong as that of the Government. The elements which compose the strength of Central Italy are condemned to disunion; the two columns commanded by Gen. Ricotti threaten mutiny if nothing be done to prevent it—a very natural thing to happen with volunteers from Umbria, the Marsh of Ancona, and Venice, who fight with enthusiasm, if, instead of being soldiers of Parma and Bologna, they were fighting for their own rights. Revolution, which does not press forward the cause, can only serve to retard it by many years, and the elements which compose the strength of Tuscany are undermined by discontent, which originates, in a great measure, from the Duke's party. By throwing the volunteers into active service they would remain steadfast, with the hope of promotion; by keeping them unemployed they will ferment—they do ferment; and one of these days they will give the signal of civil war. Our late masters are waiting for this result, in order to be able to cry out to Europe: Behold!

The election of Garibaldi as active chief would be accepted with enthusiasm, and if that activity so universally desired be withheld much longer, it will give, as you well know, fresh cause of discontent to the regular militia. Before the retaking of Perugia, Rome herself, compelled at present to remain quiet, will rise—the soldiers forming the outposts of the Pontifical army will join our columns—and between Perugia and the Abruzzi there is nothing to resist us. Eight or ten thousand men with the name of Garibaldi, and the movement in Sicily, which has been prepared for a long time, and ready for explosion at a moment's notice, would become the insurrection of the whole state. The insurrection of the State would swell the movement in Italy to such proportions that its chiefs would be entitled to treat on terms of equality, as from Power to Power, for the move must bring the King of Sardinia once more upon the field of action.

France cannot take up arms without bringing upon herself a war with the whole of Europe—Germany, Russia, England.

These things I should have told you, and all men who have been chosen to rule the country, if, instead of treating us like enemies and forcing us to abandon our country, you had been led to look upon us as men who love Italy, and for the last thirty years have been endeavoring to educate her in those sentiments of unity without which she will be lost once more.

The proposition I now make may be considered as imprudent, but cannot be considered guilty. I have sought no other aim than unity. It is for this alone that I have fought so long. I have always been, and ever shall be, unitarian in principle before anything. Those who know me may reproach me with many faults, but will acknowledge that my soul is too proud to stoop to falsehood.

I speak not for myself when I say that the persecution of exiles is a shame and reproach to Tuscany, and will injure the cause beyond all reparation. Those exiles have risen since Villafranca, for the sole purpose not of disturbing the Internal Government of the country, which they admire, and which is necessary to insure its respectability in the eyes of Europe, but merely in the hope of beholding an equal energy imparted to the external relations of the Government, for I am sure that the restoration will be idiotic, and our task is to prevent it, without any foreign or forced and imposed help. Great numbers of volunteers have enlisted, more would do so were it not for the persecutions to which they are subjected.

I have felt the necessity of telling you these things and of exposing to you the feelings of the man who loves Italy and national union better than his life.

Believe me, Signor, yours obliged,

GIUSEPPE MAZZINI.

MANIFESTO OF THE TUSCAN GOVERNMENT.

The Tuscan Moniteur of Nov. 17 publishes a note which the Tuscan Government has sent to the principal Governments of Europe respecting the vote passed by the National Assembly at its sitting on the 9th ult. The note says:

"The day on which the Congress shall be called upon to legislate on the rights reserved in the treaty of Zurich, it may be released from all fear of having to infringe on the principle of legitimacy; it will have merely to consider Austrian interests. We are confident that the great, the real intention of the Congress will be to secure the independence, and, with that, the peace of Italy.

This result can only be obtained by smoothing and acknowledging the votes of the independent States of the Peninsula. Any other combination would be not merely an Italian but a European calamity.

In support of this truth, we have a consideration that deserves mature reflection. Were it unfortunately to happen that the great Powers assembled in Congress should declare themselves opposed to the wishes and legitimate votes of the Italian people, one of these two eventualities would necessarily result: either Piedmont, as we believe, and as all Italian think with us, would refuse to adhere to this decision, and then every one sees what deplorable conse

MISCELLANEOUS.

At the Conference, at Wurzburg, of the representatives of the minor German States, the principal question to be considered was the maintenance of the rights of domicile, the establishment of Federal Courts of Justice, the national demonstration in favor of Schleswig, relative to the Federal laws relating to the press, the Rhine shipping and Holstein questions, and regulations for a uniform system of weights and measures for all Germany.

The Grand Chamber of Hesse Cassel, by a vote of 35 to 15, resolve upon addressing a memorial to the Elector, for the establishment of the Constitution of 1831.

In the Federal Diet at Frankfort, the Plenipotentiary of Hesse acceded to the proposals of the Committee, and granted some concessions in reference to the powers of the Chamber, but persevered in maintaining the Law of 1852.

PRUSSIA.

It is now said that the King's health had so much improved that his medical attendants had advised his removal to the Isle of Wight.

AUSTRIA.

An imperial autograph letter orders the Ministers to grant a full amnesty to all persons compromised by the part they have taken in Italian affairs. This amnesty will apply to civil as well as military persons. Criminal offenders of no political character are to be excepted.

The Vienna Presse states that the effectives of all regiments of Austrian Infantry is to be reduced from one hundred to eighty men.

SWITZERLAND.

Col. FRAY HERSOS, member of the Federal Government of Switzerland, has just been elected to the Presidency of the Confederation for the ensuing year. As President, he is charged with the direction of all national, and particularly of foreign, affairs. The present President of the Confederation is to take the direction of the military department, which is now held by Colonel FRAY BASSOS. M. KNUSEL, of Lucerne, has been elected Vice-President of the Executive Government for 1860.

SPAIN.

The Madrid journals continue to publish addresses to the Queen, expressing approbation of the war.

The Spanish Government is said to have entered into contracts with English firms for the supply of different sorts of stores for the army in Morocco, and for a large quantity of English coal for the fleet. Steamers had also been chartered, and one had already left England for Spain to assist in the transport service.

The Paris correspondent of the Times, says the enthusiasm with which the war with Morocco was hailed, begins slightly to subside in the Basque provinces and the 5,000 men, which it was agreed should be raised by those provinces, will partly have to be levied by conscription, instead of being composed only of volunteers.

PORTUGAL.

The King of Portugal had signed a decree ordering the dissolution of the Cortes, a measure which had become a vital question for the maintenance of the Ministry. The new Chamber will be convoked for 20th January.

INDIA.

The Bombay mail, of Nov. 12, is telegraphed via Malta. The reported death of NANA SAHIB is referred to, but the dispatch says it lacked confirmation.

Lord CANNING had addressed the Talookdars of Oude with good effect, at Lucknow.

The Wagheers had evacuated Dwarka, after several days bombardment which reduced the town to ashes.

The campaign against the whites in Bundlecund had been opened, and another upon the Chumbul was looked for.

Exchange on London 2s. 3d. Freights, 17s. 6d.@ 20s.

THE REPORTED DEATH OF NANA SAHIB.

A letter from an Indian officer says that the death of NANA SAHIB had been announced at Allahabad in large printed handbills, but it was regarded as a ruse by the NANA himself to prevent the Winter campaign which was soon to be commenced against him. Oude papers to the 11th of October make no mention of the reported death.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

At the time the mail left, Oct. 22, the money market was reported very tight and the Banks had stopped discounting. The tightness is ascribed to the tendering for Government debentures; the long and very heavy drought had broken up and the rains had set in heavy.

The steamship Surprise, with a submarine cable had touched at the Cape and proceeded to India. The steamship Chevy Chase, from Liverpool, has made a quick passage to St. Helena.

A fearful storm had prevailed off the coast, and no less than ten first-class ships were completely wrecked. The news caused much anxiety on 'Change at Liverpool, as many of the ill-fated vessels were owned in that City; one of them, the Star of the East, having a valuable cargo on board. She was bound from the East Indies, and owned by JAMES BEAZLEY, Esq., of Liverpool.

The names of the wrecked vessels are; Wigrams; Hurst, Capt. GRIMAR, from Penang to London; Jessa Rose, Chasseur, Witch of the Wave, Prince Woronzoff, Lynx, Regia, Governess, Star of the East, and Arabian.

The news at present is very vague, and the fate of the crews of the unfortunate ships is, as yet, a mystery.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE BY THE PERSIA.

LONDON MONEY MARKET.

The Stock Market had been firm, and the funds rather higher. On the 25th, however, there was a slight relapse, and Consols closed at 90⅞@⅞ for money, and 90⅞@⅞ for account.

The demand for Money had been moderately active and in a few exceptional cases rather less than the Bank minimum had been charged for accommodation.

The weekly returns of the Bank of England show an increase of bullion of £124,934. Messrs. BARING BROTHERS & Co. call the Money Market easy. They quote Bar Silver at 5s. 2½d.; Mexican Dollars 5s. 2½d., nominal; American Eagles, 76s. 3½d.

LIVERPOOL MARKETS.

LIVERPOOL, Saturday, Nov. 25.

Cotton.—The Broker's Circular says: "Since the arrival of the steamer (Persia) on Saturday last the trade have bought very sparingly, while other classes of buyers have also taken a limited quantity, the consequence has been a dull and very irregular market, in some instances giving buyers a trifling advantage, the lower qualities continuing very unsalable." East Indian and Macao have declined ⅛d. The sales of the week foot up only 37,810 bales, including 1,150 on speculation and 3,700 for export. On Friday (yesterday) the demand continued moderate, the sales reaching about 8,000 bales, including 1,000 to speculators and exporters. The market closed quiet at the following quotations:

Fair Orleans	7⅞d.	Middling Orleans	7 5-16d.
Fair Mobiles	7⅞d.	Middling Mobiles	7⅝d.
Fair Uplands	7 5-16d.	Middling Uplands	6⅞d.

Stock on hand is estimated at 425,000, of which 266,000 are American.

AT MANCHESTER.

Although the market was inactive prices continued firm at the highest rates, and the bias was still in favor of producers.

BIRMINGHAM.—Messrs. RICHARDSON, SPENCE & Co. report all descriptions of Breadstuffs in the most limited demand, and nominally unchanged since Tuesday last, on which day, as already advised, Flour and Corn declined 6d.@1s., and Wheat 2d.@3d. The quotations are as follows: Flour, 23s.@28s.; red Wheat, 9s. 6d.@10s. 2d.; white, 9s. 8d.@11s. 0d.; mixed yellow Corn, 31s.@32s. 6d., white, 35s.@38s. Messrs. ATTYA & Co. say that a further concession would be necessary to effect sales of American Wheat.

PROVISIONS.—Beef—Heavy arrivals paralyze the trade, and while there is much pressure to sell, the demand is quite limited, and prices are weak. Pork neglected, but unchanged in value. Bacon—New American is inquired for, and first arrivals will sell readily. Lard in fair demand at full prices. Sales 300 tcs. at 57s.@58s. 6d. Tallow quiet, but prices maintained; Butchers Association nominally 58s.@59s.

PRODUCE.—The Brokers' Circular quotes sales of 150 bbls. of Ashes at 27s. 3d.@27s. 6d. for both Pots and Pearls. Sugars in active demand at fully 6d. advance. Coffee dull and previous rates are not obtainable. Rice dull and drooping. RAGS—Small sales of Philadelphia at 6s. 0d.@6s., and Baltimore at 7s. 6d. FLAX Oils in limited request at unchanged prices. White Bagged Sperm £96. Linseed Oil in good request at 28s.@29s. RESIN without material change; sales at 4s. 1d.@4s. 2d. for Common to good Common; 5s. 3½s. 6d. for good Medium; and 9½s.@12s. for fine. SPIRITS TURPENTINE dull at 32s. 6d.@34s. TEA very heavy at 1s. 2½d.@1s. 2¾d. for common Congou. Other descriptions are ½d.@1d. cheaper—but Greens maintain their value.

LONDON MARKETS.

Messrs. BARING BROTHERS & Co. report the corn market less firm, and to sell it would be necessary to consult to a reduction of 1d.@2d. on WHEAT. White American 40s.@48s.; Red 44s.@46s. FLOUR 23s.@25s. Peas dull at £3 10 for both bars and rails. Scotch Pigs advanced to 55s. Sugars in good demand, especially lower qualities, and prices advanced fully 6d. @ cwt. Coffee firm. Jute 10s. ₱ ton dearer. Linseed further advanced 3d.@1s. Linseed Cakes in good demand. New-York £10; Boston £9 10s. Linseed Oil firm at 28s., on the spot, and 28s. 3d.@28s. 6d. for

(For the Weekly Press, Nov. 30, 1859.)

Cotton sold to a fair extent for export, and better, and, of course, all descriptions, owing to the very limited supply, advanced in price, and consequently lost some of the business before nominal. The quotations are: New-Orleans fair, 10½c.; ordinary, 11½c. Sales of the week, 4,300 bales, exclusive of a considerable quantity on speculation. Stock on hand, 22,700 bales. HAZARDOUS firm and rather dearer. Pot Ashes firm, but Pearls scarce and nominally dearer. Corn unchanged. Oats dull but steady in price. Rice without alteration. Sugar rather dearer and in steady demand. TALLOW has slightly advanced. WHALEBONE inactive.

AMERICAN SECURITIES.

Messrs. D. BELL, SON & Co. report as follows: "There has been, during the past week, a steady demand for the various American State Stocks, and more inquiry for the better descriptions of Railroad Bonds, and prices are generally very firm:

THE LATEST BY THE PERSIA.

LIVERPOOL, Friday Evening, Nov. 25.

In the afternoon a decline of ⅛ per cent. took place in the funds, notwithstanding the increased firmness of the Paris Bourse. There was an active demand for money. The demand at the bank continues steady, but is not likely to increase materially so long as good bills are taken in other quarters at 3½ per cent. The bullion opens at the bank to-day. The demand for bills on Holland, Frankfort and Hamburg continues, and prices were again lower. Other exchanges exhibit little alteration.

In the case of Paris, firmness was shown.

Times City Article, Friday evening—English funds open without alteration, and after a slight rise and fall returned to their first quotation. The demand for discount about the same as yesterday, very little done below 3½ ₱ cent., a partial reaction this afternoon, all of the Railway stock closing ½ to ¾ ₱ cent. lower.

Bank returns show an increase of £124,934 in stock of bullion. Wind southeast. Weather fine.

The Board of Trade Returns for the month of October were issued yesterday.

The aggregate exports of the month are returned at £449,079 more than in October, 1858, but £267,916 less than in October, 1857. Those for the ten months of the present year, however, have reached the unprecedented total of £106,756,184, being 12 per cent. more than last year, and 1¾ per cent. more than in 1857. The returns for the month show the activity lately witnessed in the exports. Cotton is not fully kept up; as regards linens, the amount is somewhat below the average, but the exports of woolens have suddenly and largely increased. There is also a rally in iron and haberdashery. Tin plates, silks and raw wool still figure on the unfavorable side.

The aggregate railway traffic of the United Kingdom for the week ending Nov. 19, shows an increase of £47,210 over the same week last year.

The Times, in its weekly review, says the produce markets have been firmer this week, and speculative inquiry has slightly increased. In Liverpool a further improvement in price is consequently observable, and transactions have taken place to a fair extent for export.

DISARMAMENT.

The Morning Post characterizes the recent Brussels telegram respecting a simultaneous disarmament by France and England as being absurd on the face.

Disarmament is the very last thing France could ask. The very last thing England could accede to—our armaments are not at all based upon any French preparations if we adopt measures of a defensive nature; they are undertaken as against all comers and against a combination of Powers. We do not vary in accordance with the varying strength of our neighbors.

The Post believes that the preliminaries which the English Government have considered necessary previous to the assembly of a Congress are in a fair way of settlement, and we may therefore look forward to the assembly of the Congress at no very distant date. The Times says the report in question was from the first only unworthy of attention.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Times, in a leader on the volunteer movement, says that if we are to have a really imposing force, it must be to a great extent consisting of men of the artizan class.

The Post, in a leader, treats upon the exclusion of Ireland from the act enabling volunteers to be enrolled.

The Times, in some remarks on recent and forthcoming meetings of the shipping interest, proposes to give the recondite meaning of these gatherings—it is not enough to drive out the Frenchmen and the Americans—British shipping means sailing ships, and on every principle of protection and prohibition, the sailing ship, being literally the weaker vessel, has a right to be protected against the formidable rivalry of screw steamers.

A marriage is arranged between Major-General Hon THOMAS ASHBURNHAM, brother of the Earl of ASHBURNHAM, and Miss FOLEY, sister of K. FOLEY.

Her Majesty's ship Wrangler returned to Woolwich yesterday, from an experimental cruise to try the 40-pound and 80-pound Armstrong gun at sea. A most complete course of experiments was carried out. Sixty rounds of ammunition with the elongated gun were fired with perfect success, and every experiment pertaining to the gun was pronounced faultless.

MAIL NEWS.

The Calcutta and China mails viâ Marseilles will be delivered in London on Monday morning.

The Orissa with the heavy portion of the Bombay mails, passed First Castle, at 1 this morning.

The Cape Royal mail steamer Phœbe, arrived at Plymouth yesterday morning, after a very fast passage of 24 days. She left Table Bay Oct. 22, St. Helena 31st, and Ascension Nov. 4.

Scene at the Dead-Letter Office.

VENDUE OF UNCLAIMED ARTICLES.

From the Washington Star, Dec. 7.

A stranger in the city would have been puzzled to account for the furious eagerness displayed last night by the crowd struggling to get into MCGUIRE'S auction-room. The fair sex was just as crazy as the men, and not a few ladies braved the mud and rain, and jostled at the door for admission in right good earnest. The attraction was the great "Dead-Letter Office Sale!" advertised for some weeks to take place on this night.

It was announced that the catalogue consisted of articles accumulated in the Dead Letter office since 1857, (the Department having used every effort to find the proper owners and being unable to do so,) and they would now be sold for the postage; the proceeds, if any, after paying charges, to be deposited in the United States Treasury, subject to order should the proper owners hereafter be found. The articles came from the Post-office in sealed packages, and no opportunity having thus been obtained of getting a peep of examination, the bidding was somewhat in the dark but generally spirited. The buyers naturally supposed that the articles thus sent by mail as pledges of affection must be about the correct thing in point of value.

The auctioneer said he would warrant nothing, as they wanted to close the thing up finally, but if he knew anything to be worthless he would intimate the fact when it was put up.

A very large proportion—perhaps three-quarters—of the articles were pieces of jewelry. Of these again a large proportion were finger-rings, there being no less than 504, many of them heavy plain gold wedding rings. Then there were earings in any quantity, gold pencils, bracelets, gold and silver watches, chains, lockets, fruit knives, breast-pins, studs, fob-chains, medals, etc., etc.

One of the lockets put up for sale, on being opened, was found to contain a miniature and was immediately withdrawn, as the Department reserves all portraits, not being allowed by the law to sell them.

There was quite a sprinkling of books: The Way to Heaven, Life and Speeches of Henry Clay, 2 vols.; Keeping the Heart, Fatalist, 100 Catechisms, Fort's Medical Practice, Stockton's Sermons, Missouri Harmony, African Preacher, Paradise Lost, Allyn's Ritual, Laws of Georgia, a dozen Catechisms, Fred Douglas, Sumner Family, Life of Fremont, Danger in the Dark, Green Book, Hymn Book, Flowers of Piety, Catholic Missal, Livingstone's Travels, five German Books, Cotton is King, Bay State Glee Book, &c., &c., &c.

Among the old things in the miscellany were an extraordinary pair of embroidered suspenders, (German style,) which sold for $1; 1 regalia, 5th degree, I. O. O. F., (bought $1 75;) patent inhaling tube, to

The great secret of the speed of Flora Temple (the fastest trotting horse in the world) has been discovered. It has been found by measurement that her stride—small as the animal herself is—is "equal to that of a sixteen-hand horse." She wins by her long, low, locomotive style of going, which works with the saving exactitude of machinery, and wastes no power in unnecessary action, or in what is more graphically termed "style."

A gas explosion at the blast furnace in Fort Edward on Friday morning, injured the works to the extent of about $600. The village paper says: "The exact cause or origin of the explosion we are unable to explain, but the report was like a cannon, and the bellows-room was pretty well riddled. The person who had charge of the bellows had a narrow escape for his life. The accident will not prevent the furnace from working as usual, but less iron will be made."

The clerks in the St. Louis Post-office "struck" and quit work on Saturday, Dec. 3, because the office was not decently warmed; the Treasury Department at Washington refusing to authorize or furnish the necessary heating apparatus. The citizens had to wait twenty-four hours for their mail matter, in consequence, and would have been compelled to wait still longer, but for the fact of the Postmaster taking upon himself the responsibility of putting up stoves, and then telegraphing the fact to Washington.

A clergyman in St. Louis was lately fleeced out of one hundred dollars by a man and woman. The latter pretended to be in distress, and the clergyman accompanied her to her residence, where she related a pathetic story of griefs and miseries. He pulled out his pocket-book to give her some money, when she snatched it and a scuffle ensued. Her accomplice then rushed in and drove the clergyman from the house, after getting his pocket-book.

Thomas Slaughter, a colored saloon keeper in Detroit, has recently married a Scotch girl in the same city. The Desdemona of this disgusting affair is but 16 years of age, and is said to be a very fair looking girl. She has a husband living in the interior of the State, whose name is Green. Slaughter has a colored wife, and neither party has been divorced. Elder Berry, who performed the marriage ceremony, has been arrested.

Ten slaves, five males and five females, ran off from Lagrange, Mo., on Monday week. They stole a flat-boat and crossed the Mississippi River into Illinois. On Friday night, another negro, owned in the same place, also effected his escape, making eleven in all. There were six slaves lodged in jail at Cambridge, Md., last Monday. They were detected in making an attempt to run away.

The Philadelphia Ledger mentions a singular fact in connection with the recent coal-oil discoveries in Pennsylvania. In many places in the Valley of Oil Creek the ground is covered with pits, hundreds and thousands of them, evidently dug for the purpose of gathering oil, and at a period so remote that trees 250 years old are growing over them. The query is, by whom were these pits dug, and for what purpose was the oil gathered?

Dr. John Green, of Worcester, has presented to that city his library, now in the possession of the Lyceum and Library Association, for a public library; and the Lyceum and Library Association have generously made the same disposal of their collection. The library of Dr. Green contains 7,000 volumes, selected with great care, and at a cost of about $12,000. That of the Association contains 4,500 volumes.

A sale of the Philadelphia Ledger building, and the building known as the "Quincy Granite Building," No. 311 Chestnut-street, took place Monday evening, under a writ of partition for the settlement of an estate. The building at the corner of Third and Chestnut streets was sold for the sum of $75,100 cash. The other brought $46,600—also cash; making a total of $121,700.

Dr. John Green, of Worcester, Mass., has presented to that city his library, now in the possession of the Lyceum and Library Association, for a public library; and the Lyceum and Library Association have generously made the same disposal of their collection. The library of Dr. Green contains seven thousand volumes, selected with great care, and at a cost of $12,000.

In conformity to the usual custom, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, with his associates, Judges Nelson, Grier, Clifford and Campbell, called upon President Buchanan on Monday. Vice-President Breckinridge, and a large number of private individuals also paid their respects to the President on the occasion of the opening of Congress.

Eight inches of snow fell in the White Mountain districts on Sunday, Dec. 4, and the day was very cold. Saturday last was the coldest day of the season among the mountains. At sunrise the mercury stood at only five degrees above zero, and it did not rise above ten degrees throughout the day. At the last accounts, the mountaineers had fine sleighing and skating.

Mr. Witham, residing at Embden, Me., on Thursday last threatened to kill his wife and her father and mother, because his wife had left him in a quarrel. He took aim with a rifle at his father-in-law, who seized hold of the weapon just in time to turn it aside when it was discharged, and no injury was done. Witham was arrested and held for trial.

John Reed died recently at Liberty, Ohio, of an injury received on the previous evening at a corn-husking. At the close of the husking the young folks engaged in a wrestling match, and while two were thus engaged, the one threw the other around so that his feet struck the deceased, who was standing by, in the abdomen, causing his death the following day.

The catalogue of Wabash College, Indiana, for 1860, states the whole number of students in attendance at that institution at 156. They are divided as follows: Seniors, 4; Juniors, 12; Sophomores, 14; Freshmen, 26; Preparatory, second year, 34; first year, 26; Normal, second year, 19; first year, 21.

Lawrence Academy, at Groton, has recently come into the possession of $30,000, which was bequeathed by the late William Lawrence, Esq., of this City. The original sum was $20,000, and the remainder is the result of interest. The productive fund of the institution is now more than $60,000.

A bill for the extension of time to the San Antonio and Mexican Gulf Railroad has passed the Texas Senate to the second reading. The extension of time asked is until the 1st day of January, 1862, and that there is to be completed 75 miles of said road by the 1st day of January, 1862. There will be no difficulty in getting the bill through the House.

The citizens of Lawrence, (Kansas) and vicinity have contributed land, city lots and money, estimated at $20,000, towards the erection of the proposed Monumental College. Amos A. Lawrence, of Boston, has given $14,000—on condition that $20,000 more are contributed, which will soon be done probably.

A public meeting was to have been held at Marshall, Texas, on Saturday, the 26th ult., for the purpose of taking action and giving public expression in reference to persons capable of uttering, writing, or in any manner whatever promulgating sentiments incendiary or dangerous in their character to existing Southern institutions.

Messrs. Samuel H. Walley and Jacob Sleeper, the Receivers appointed by the Supreme Judicial Court to examine the accounts of Isaac F. Shepard, late Treasurer of the People's Five Cent Savings Bank of Boston, have submitted their report. It shows that the entire deficit runs up to $57,000.

It was discovered in Philadelphia, last week that a young man who was convicted of an outrage on a little girl, in November, and sentenced to the Penitentiary for seven years, was arrested and convicted under a mistaken identity.

A public meeting of the members and friends of the Presbyterian Church of Canada in connection with the Church of Scotland, was held at Montreal, Dec. 5, for the purpose of devising measures for the establishment of a General Home Mission scheme.

The female teachers of two of the Public Schools of Washington have remonstrated to the Trustees against the use of Lorring's History of the United States as a text-book, on the ground that it is too complicated for study in the Schools.

Rev. T. L. Breckenridge, a Baptist clergyman in Lafayette, Ind., has preached a sermon extolling the act of John Brown. His congregation is the largest and wealthiest in the city.

At Newcastle, Del., John J. Bowen has been convicted of the murder of John W. Dewlin in Delaware City. The prisoner's mother and sister sat by him in Court during the trial.

The office of State Printer, in Texas, has been abolished by the Legislature, and the work is to be put out to the lowest bidder.

The Legislature of Texas has refused to vote an appropriation to provide newspapers for its members.

The colored people of Montreal have subscribed $65 for the benefit of John Brown's family.

CANADIAN POSTAL ARRANGEMENTS.—The Toronto Leader says: "A short time ago we announced the conclusion, by Postmaster-General Smith, of an important Postal arrangement with the United States Government. We are now happy to have it in our power to add that this arrangement has received the ratification of the Imperial Government. Mr. SMITH, as we announced at the time, went to England to bring this about; and his success has been as great there as it was at Washington. Under the engagement entered into, we are to carry the Western United States Mails between Detroit and Liverpool, viâ Portland in Winter, and viâ Riviere du Loup in Summer. The eastern section of the Grand Trunk Railroad thus becomes of greater importance than had been anticipated; there will be a saving of time by using the railroad instead of the steamers between Quebec and Riviere du Loup.

Canada is to receive the full ocean rate on the Western United States correspondence, for the service she is to perform; while she foregoes the inland rate of postage upon it, as do also the Americans the internal postage on Canadian letters, between Portland and the Province line. The Americans are to have, between the Cunard and the Canadian lines of steamers, a bi-weekly communication with Europe. The United States mails are to leave Chicago on Thursday mornings; and on reaching Detroit, the same day, they are to be transferred to the Grand Trunk Railway, by which they will be carried to Portland

THE SAVINGS BANK DEFALCATION IN BOSTON.—The Receivers of the Five Cent Savings Bank in Hanover-street, have made their first report to the Supreme Court, of which we present a summary in another column. It will be seen that the deficiency reported is $57,011 94, not all attributable to the defalcation of Mr. SHEPARD, however, but partly resulting from bad investments. The amount taken by the defaulting treasurer is not stated. The affairs of the Bank have been very loosely managed, and from present appearances the loss to depositors will be from 50 to 75 per cent.—Boston Journal Dec. 6.

LAW REPORTS.

GENERAL SESSIONS.

Conviction of Gordon, the Emigrant-runner, for Assault.

No witnesses having been summoned on Tuesday, nothing of importance took place in this Court on Wednesday, but yesterday the regular business, temporarily interrupted by the election, was resumed, before Recorder BARNARD.

John Gordon, alias Stephen Gordon, an emigrant-runner, charged with assault and battery on a Frenchman named Jean Dulaurie, on the 20th August, was placed on trial. Dulaurie testified, through an interpreter, that he arrived in this port, on that day, from Key West, intending to take passage for Europe in a steamer; that he purchased a ticket through the defendant's agency, and found that, instead of a steamer, he had to go by a slow sailing vessel; that he remonstrated with defendant, and by him, and a boatman who was not arrested, and whose name is unknown to him, he was assaulted and beaten to such an extent, that being in fear of his life, he jumped overboard. Ex-Recorder Smith defended Gordon, but he was convicted. On motion of Mr. Smith, Recorder BARNARD deferred passing sentence till Saturday, but remarked that if any person should address him on Gordon's behalf, outside the Court, the punishment would be largely increased. It was necessary for a Judge to put a stop to these outside applications for leniency to a convicted culprit, especially in the case of such a man as Gordon. His remarks were intended to apply to politicians, who immediately on the conviction of one of their friends, were in the habit of making a rush to the Judge's office, or of waylaying him in the street.

Ex-Recorder Smith admitted that during the three years he occupied the Bench, he was subjected to continual annoyances of the same nature. But such would not be the case in the present instance.

The prisoner was remanded for sentence.

John Graham pleaded guilty to forgery in the fourth degree. He passed counterfeit notes at Thorpe's Hotel, the Hone House, the Monument House, Howell's, and other places in Broadway and Union-square. He is very respectably connected, and his name, it may be incidentally said, is not Graham. Remanded for sentence.

James S. Adams and John Candy, indicted for burglary in the third degree, were next disposed of. Adams was tried and convicted, and sentenced to two years and six months in the State Prison. Candy pleaded guilty, and was remanded for sentence.

Felix Varisine, indicted for larceny of money, pleaded guilty to an attempt to commit larceny, and was sent to the Penitentiary for six months.

James Brown was convicted of an assault and battery on Michael Barry, an officer of the Twenty-sixth Precinct, on Nov. 5. He was sent for one year to the Penitentiary and fined $250, to remain in prison, after the expiration of his year's sentence, until the fine is paid.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT—BEFORE HON JUDGE INGERSOLL.

In the case of Charles Goodyear vs. Horace H. Day, to which reference was made in our law columns on Wednesday, the following order was made yesterday by Judge INGERSOLL:

"At a Stated Term of the Circuit Court of the United States of America, for the Southern District of New-York, in the Second Circuit, held at the City Hall, in the City of New-York, on Tuesday, the 6th day of December, in the year of our Lord 1859.

Present, Hon. CHARLES A. INGERSOLL, Dist. Judge.

Charles Goodyear vs. Horace H. Day.—Mr. E. W. Dickerson, for the complainant, having, on the bill, &c., moved for injunction according to the prayer of such bill, and Messrs. C. A. Seward and E. W. Stoughton of counsel for defence, having moved to postpone the hearing of such motion to give the defendant further time to make answer to the bill and affidavits in the moving papers, and they having been heard in behalf of such motion, and Messrs. Dickerson and J. T. Brady in opposition.

It is ordered that such hearing be postponed until the 17th day of December, inst., at the opening of Court on that day, or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, and that, in the meantime, until the decision on the motion for such injunction, (it appearing that the bill, supported by the moving papers, if not answered by affidavit or otherwise, is sufficient to authorize the injunction prayed for, and that no answer has been made to the allegations contained in it, either by affidavit or otherwise,) if said Day do any of the acts or things sought to be enjoined, the complainant may renew the motion for injunction, as aforesaid, to restrain the defendant, as prayed in the bill, until the hearing and decision on such motion, the affidavits in answer in opposition to said motion to be served on or before 12 A. M. of the Wednesday preceding the day appointed for such hearing. (A true copy.)

KENNETH G. WHITE, Clerk.

The Sharp Judgment.

Jacob Sharp vs. The Mayor, &c.—This is on a renewal of the application, on the part of the City, to set aside the judgment obtained by the plaintiff in the case, on the ground that it was obtained by fraud and collusion.

The cause was referred to Mr. Harrington, of the firm of Stoughton & Harrington, who reported in favor of the plaintiff, and judgment was entered thereon. Motion was made, on the 19th of October last, to set the judgment aside for the reasons given. The motion was argued at great length, and on the 2d of November, Justice INGRAHAM rendered a long opinion denying the motion, but granting leave to renew.

The motion was now again renewed before Justice CERVEN, at Chambers, and argument is still pending. The case has already been fully reported in the TIMES.

Mr. Noyes for motion; Mr. Field for Mr. Sharp, and Mr. Fullerton and Moses Ely for City.

The Suit for Lawyers' Fees—Verdict for Plaintiffs.

Benedict, Burr & Benedict vs. William Nelson, et al.—This action was reported in the TIMES of yesterday, and was now concluded, no more evidence being offered.

In his argument to the jury, counsel for the defendant contended that it was generally known, especially by lawyers themselves, that that class of gentlemen were in the habit of charging enormous sums for trifling services, and that merely for looking over a few papers, or for the slightest advice, large fees were to be paid. Counsel urged the jury to give only such a sum as the time consumed was worth. In reply to this tirade against the profession, and its liberality, Mr. Smith said that if he had such an opinion of lawyers, he would at once forever leave the profession, and decline to associate with any of its representatives. Counsel could not see why a man should remain in a profession which he should be ashamed of, and which by the other side was held up as an oppressor of the people, and be subject and liable to the suspicion of being as mean as the meanest of the school, when that man had himself concluded that such was the case. For his part, when he was so criminal, he would abandon his occupation. Counsel then went on to say that the profession of the law was a liberal and magnanimous one—that while it demanded remunerative fees from the rich, it frequently served the poor for nought; that it only asked fair compensation for its unappreciated and incessant toil, by day and by night.

After the charge of the Court the jury retired and soon returned with a verdict for the plaintiff for the amount of the original bill, $250.

Augustus F. Smith for plaintiffs; Edward Seymour for defendant.

The Colonelcy of the First Regiment.

The People ex rel. Walter W. Price vs. Spencer H. Smith.—This was an action by the plaintiff to establish his title to the position of Colonel of the First Regiment, now held by the defendant.

The relator sets forth that he was elected to the Colonelcy now occupied by the plaintiff, in March, 1859, he having received a greater number of votes for the office than any other person living in that military district.

It appears that at the time of the election of officers the relator was a resident of the proper military district, composed of the First and Second Wards, while the respondent was a resident of the Sixteenth Ward, at that time; that the relator received eight votes for the office, and the respondent received 21 votes.

The relator, living in the district, now claims that he was only eligible to the office, being the only resident of the district voted for.

The respondent claimed that he was not ineligible to office, because he went out of the district while still a member of the Regiment.

The cause now came on, and was tried before Justice JAMES, of the Circuit, without a jury, and decision was reserved.

Quite a number of military gentlemen were present, and much interest was felt in the proceedings.

Lyman Tremain and W. F. Howe for relator; L. Pitkin for respondent.

Verdict.

Barlyte vs. Huges.—This was an action for assault and battery, and was reported in the TIMES of yesterday. The trial was before Justice SUTHERLAND at the Circuit, and now resulted in a verdict for plaintiff for $200.

Decisions.

SUPREME COURT, SPECIAL TERM.

DAVIES, J.—McKenzie vs. McKenzie.—An order will be entered in this cause, dissolving the injunction therein, unless the plaintiff brings the same to trial, at the present Special Term of this Court, if reached on the Calendar; if not then reached, the first Special Term it is reached, in which event, the injunction to be continued till the decision of the case.

Mendenes vs. Clover.—Order settled.

James, J.—Jordan vs. Essex.—Let the [illegible] be referred, to take the proofs and report to this Court.

The People ex rel. Job Roberts vs. Rogers, Strong and Sarah Stuart.—It is clear, so far as Miss Stuart is concerned, that the commitment was right and legally warranted by the testimony, and the motion for her discharge must be denied. As to the other, remanded to prison. In the case of Miss Stuart, there appears sufficient grounds shown for her arrest and detention, and, therefore, she must be discharged. Let an order be entered in accordance.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

There is to be no message this week. The Senate yesterday, after listening to a discussion that ever fresh and sufficient topic, Slavery, adjourned until Monday. The discussion was not without points of interest. Mr. TRUMBULL, of Illinois, having the floor upon his amendment to Mr. MASON's resolution, spoke at great length and with much force in defence of the Republican platform; yet in a sense so moderate and conservative as to disarm the attacks of the more ultra Southern Senators. He denied that Slavery was a crime, where it existed under the protection of the laws; and admitted that it not only so existed in the Slave States, but also in the District of Columbia. As to the admission of new Slave States into the Union, he expressed his readiness to vote for them, whenever they presented themselves; and was at pains to repudiate the name of Mr. SEWARD as the leader of the Republican Party. Gen. Davis, of Mississippi, and Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, followed. In the House, the honors of the day devolved mainly upon two representatives from Ohio, Messrs. CORWIN and COX. Mr. CORWIN made a speech almost, in outline, the counterpart of that of Mr. TRUMBULL, in the Senate; eulogizing Virginia and South Carolina; disclaiming all hostility to Slavery, or any design to exclude slave States, and repudiating Mr. SEWARD. Mr. COX, in rejoinder, could not accept the professions of Mr. CORWIN as the creed of the Republicans of Ohio, especially of those in the Western Reserve. He claimed that with the exception of that infected region Ohio was eminently sound and conservative. The House, without attempting a third ballot for Speaker, adjourned.

The intelligence from Europe brought by the Persia, which arrived yesterday with dates to Nov. 26, is of subordinate interest. The question of a Congress remained undecided. It was rumored that conditions preliminary had been propounded by England, which were unacceptable to the French and Austrian Governments; and that for the present the call had been withheld. These rumors the Times discredits, and the Post, speaking semi-officially, says the British requirements are in a fair way of adjustment, and that the assembling of the Congress may be looked for immediately. Another story to the effect that the return of Lord COWLEY to London, from his post as Ambassador at Paris, had for its object a proposition for a simultaneous disarmament of France and England, is also pronounced fictitious. Better feelings, in the meantime, had sprung up between the two countries, and while the belligerent preparations and popular delusions prevailed with unabating vigor throughout the United Kingdom, there is no longer an urgent apprehension of war. The condition of Italy exhibits no material change. The new fortifications of Bologna are urged forward with energy; Gen. FANTI, in a recent order of the day, exhorts his Central Army to renewed patriotism, courage, and vigilance; Gen. GARIBALDI was at Nice. A circular note from the Sardinian Government, addressed to its diplomatic agents, states the ground taken by the Court of Turin, in reference to the Regency question, and prefigures the policy it designs to pursue. Contemporaneously with this manifesto, appears another from the Tuscan authorities, uttering an eloquent and menacing protest against any attempt of the Congress to restore the deposed Dukes. From India, we learn that the reported death of the Nena is doubted, the rumor being regarded as a ruse of the adroit rebel. Severe storms had visited the Southern Coast of Africa. In the vicinity of the Cape of Good Hope ten first-class vessels are reported as lost.

The meeting of Massachusetts men, to disavow all sympathy with the aims of JOHN BROWN, and to reassure the South, was most respect-worthy in names and numbers, was held in Faneuil Hall, Ex-Governor LILCOLN presided. A throng of Vice-Presidents and Secretaries, among whom were four other Ex-Governors of the State assisting. The resolutions were cogently to the point, as were also the addresses. The principal speech of the occasion was that of Mr. EDWARD EVERETT, who spoke at length, repeating many of his standard Union phrases, but pleading earnestly and eloquently against the dangerous tendencies of the day. Among other sympathetic letters received from distinguished citizens of New-England, was one from Ex-President PIERCE, denunciatory of the actual agitation and its cause.

From Hayti we learn that a public sale was to be made of the confiscated property of the Ex-Emperor SOULOUQUE, as well as of that of his Minister, DELVA, in order to reimburse, as far as possible, the immense sums which these persons had abstracted from the royal treasury. A Commission had been sent to relieve those who had suffered by the late severe gales on the coast. Lotteries and Insurance Companies with profane titles had been established, and a bank with a capital of five million dollars had been chartered. Much satisfaction was expressed with the course the Government had thus far pursued.

The Comptroller sent a communication to the Board of Councilmen, giving a summary of expenditures on City accounts, and also upon the several Trust and Special accounts, from Jan. 1, 1859, to Nov. 30, ult., amounting in the aggregate to sixteen million three hundred and sixty-two thousand three hundred and ninety-six dollars and forty-five cents. The Aldermen held a session as a Board of City Canvassers, and made some progress in revising the returns of the Municipal election.

In the action brought by Mr. E. C. BENEDICT to recover for professional services rendered as counsel on the trial of a cause, the jury have rendered a verdict for plaintiff for $250; the amount of his bill as rendered to the defendants. The case of WALTER W. PRICE vs. SPENCER H. SMITH, a suit brought to establish plaintiff's title to the Colonelcy of the First Regiment, was brought to trial, yesterday, before Justice JAMES, of the Supreme Court, at Circuit, but no decision was rendered. In the case of CHARLES GOODYEAR against HORACE H. DAY, heard on Tuesday, before Judge INGERSOLL, in the United States Circuit Court, in which the former asked for an injunction to restrain DAY from prosecuting any suits against venders or manufacturers of certain kinds of elastic woven rubber goods until a final decree shall be rendered by the Court determining the exclusive right to such goods, an order was granted postponing the hearing until the 17th inst., and declaring that if said DAY, in the meantime, "do any of the acts or things sought to be enjoined, the complainant may renew his motion for injunction, as aforesaid." In the Court of General Sessions, business, which was temporarily suspended by the election, was actively resumed, Recorder BARNARD presiding. Of several cases disposed of, the most important was that of the emigrant runner, GORDON, indicted for a violent assault on a Frenchman, DELAURIE, by whom he was accused of fraud in the selling a ticket for a passage to Europe. He was readily convicted.

Capt. W. F. Lynch, before the Kane Monument Association, at Cooper Institute, lectured on the commercial importance of the East, and the necessity of a new and more direct route, hinting that a commercial necessity might bring about a revivification of the Holy Land and the restoration of the Jews.

The stock market was firmer yesterday, owing partly to the English advices by the steamship Persia, and partly to the rumoring also in money circles of a pressure on the money loan. There was also a pressure on Illinois Central shares. New-York Central sold at 80½, and closed 80¾.

Cotton was purchased to the extent of 5,000 bales, chiefly on tegnrin. Prices were steady. Flour and Wheat were less sought after, especially by shippers. Light receipts and cold weather, however, had the effect of checking the downward tendency of the market. The transactions in other kinds of Breadstuffs were limited. Provisions were freely dealt in. Pork closed lower. A moderate inquiry prevailed for Groceries, Spirits Turpentine, Whisky, Hay, Hops, Tallow and Linseed Oil. The Freight engagements were fair.

The Temper of Virginia.

If any one doubts the substantial insanity of the State of Virginia, we commend him to a perusal of an article which we copy in another column, from the Richmond Examiner. That journal speaks of it as an "able and interesting communication,"—from the pen "of one of the most accomplished gentlemen and gifted writers of the South, whose articles are always both instructive and valuable." So far as style goes the article is well enough:—but its picture of evils, and its suggestion of remedies indicate nightmare, rather than healthy digestion and practical common sense.

The writer represents the entire North as "crazed on the subject of Slavery." He evidently believes that the great mass of our people are rabid, ultra-Abolitionists—eager to march with arms in our hands into the Southern States, for the violent emancipation of their slaves, and frenzied with delight at JOHN BROWN's invasion, and with melancholy horror at its failure! It seems impossible that any human being should live in so secluded a region of the earth, as to be thus ignorant of the state of things here, and thus torment himself with the fearful shapes of his own imagination. But anything is possible in Virginia now-a-days. While their own local papers so sedulously misrepresent and falsify the facts of Northern life and opinion,—while their Governor gives these misstatements the weight of his official authority, and the only Northern papers allowed to circulate are those which live by the agitation and alarm they can create, it is idle to hope for anything like sanity of thought or wisdom of action on the part of their people.

But the remedy which this "able and distinguished" Virginian suggests may, possibly, startle his own constituents into the suspicion that their fears are wrecking judgment and common sense. He proposes to invite the Emperor of France to send his army and navy hither, and take the Southern States under his protection! He would prefer such an arrangement with England, which is the "natural ally of the South;" but fears the cant and fanaticism of her Queen would render such an alliance impossible. From LOUIS NAPOLEON, however, nothing of the sort is to be apprehended. He is ready for anything. He is obliged to keep an immense army and navy on foot, and needs employment for them. He will be very glad to "lend them to the South and maintain them at his own expense, in exchange for the freedom of Southern trade." And this is the bargain which this "able and accomplished" Southern statesman proposes to make. The South is to be held by French troops,—maintained at French expense,—occupying Southern forts, and protecting the South, by sea and land, against the North! He thinks the offer of Free-Trade would secure these immense advantages to the South. We venture to suggest that the South could procure them at a much cheaper rate. LOUIS NAPOLEON will probably be very glad to take possession of the South gratuitously. Despotic masters of armies do not generally regard large and fertile tracts of land. Even the North—hard, barren, fanatical and unattractive as it is, could possibly induce LOUIS NAPOLEON or Queen VICTORIA into a similar act of beneficence, without giving anything like the price which the Examiner's correspondent proposes to pay. He consoles himself for the degradations of such a surrender by the reflection that it would "cause grass to grow in the streets of New-York." Suppose it should; how would Virginia be benefited by such a consummation? It might for the moment gratify her resentment, but it would not lighten her burdens, nor reconcile her people to the military despotism they would have voluntarily fastened upon their necks.

We have neither shown, nor felt any disposition hitherto to under-estimate the apprehensions of the Southern people, or to ridicule the alarm which their misconceptions of Northern sentiment have been so well calculated to excite. So long as they believe that the whole North sympathizes with JOHN BROWN's invasion, it is perfectly natural that they should feel excited and indignant. If the fact were so, they would be perfectly justified in declaring war against the North instantly. But we have confidently trusted that time and better information would disabuse their minds of these utterly false impressions—that they would perceive ere long that the North is not hostile to their rights, or disposed either to wage or countenance any warfare on their peace or their welfare; and that they would then return to their accustomed moderation and fairness of judgment. Such propositions as this in the Examiner, we hope, will arrest the attention of the conservative portion of the South, and lead them to consider into what perilous shoals and quicksands of insanity they are allowing the Southern public mind to drift.

Dangerous Powers.

Granting everything that Postmaster-General HOLT says in his recent letter, touching the transmission of incendiary publications by mails, of the right of the States to pass laws prohibiting the postmasters from distributing books, newspapers or pamphlets tending to excite slaves to insurrection, we must say the power which he claims for the postmasters is, in our opinion, one with which no postmaster should be armed. The persons who fill that office now throughout the country are rarely men whose education qualifies them to exercise a censorship of the Press, either with judgment or discretion. They are not selected with reference to anything but their electioneering abilities, and to charge such people with the duty of examining all the books and papers which citizens of the United States may have sent to them, and of deciding which they shall receive, is more than ridiculous. If it has become necessary to inspect the printed matter arriving at the various post-offices in the Slave States before distribution, provision should be made for having it done by regularly appointed censors, men of education and character, appointed by the State, and not by the Federal Government, and responsible to their fellow-citizens for the proper exercise of these functions.

Fancy such functionaries as are appointed to office now-a-days, being charged by law with the inspection of the mail-matter addressed to everybody in their districts, and being at liberty to retain and destroy without accountability, any portion of it they please. If we [illegible] in the selection of those whom it charges with their maintenance.

The Doings of Congress.

Congress seems to have converted itself into a debating club of agitators. As no organization has been effected no business can be done. The debate into which both branches have plunged so unceremoniously can have no higher practical object, therefore, than to free the minds of individuals, settle points of political position and feed the flame of sectional excitement throughout the country. It is possible that some members may persuade themselves that they are in this way promoting the harmony and stability of the Union;—but it is much more likely that many of them are neither doing, nor seeking to do, any such thing.

Mr. MASON's resolution in the Senate ought to have been passed promptly and without objection from any quarter. It is an eminently proper resolution, and the inquiry which it calls for ought to be entered upon forthwith. The debate, however, which has been had upon it may have the effect of defining the positions of individual Senators and of clearing the political atmosphere of some of the poisonous vapors with which it was charged.

In the House, the discussion is useless and factious. Some two or three years ago, a gentleman named HELPER, from North Carolina, wrote a book on Slavery,—ostensibly in the interest of the non-slaveholding whites of the Southern States,—pointing out their depressed condition, and designed to stir them up to measures of redress and relief. Soon after the Presidential election, sundry Republicans conceived the design of making this book a campaign document, and they therefore subscribed considerable sums of money for the publication of a campaign edition, and signed a certificate of its interest and value as a book of popular instruction on the subject which it discussed. For a year or two neither the book nor the movement attracted any particular attention. Nobody denounced it—nobody thought it worth while to arraign those who had recommended it as incendiaries or traitors, and the book was producing no perceptible effect anywhere.

But quite recently the Herald has been engaged, with its accustomed zeal and industry, in the pleasant and patriotic task of proving that the whole North is a vast hive of Abolition conspirators,—that JOHN BROWN's crusade was prompted, aided and indorsed by thousands and tens of thousands of our most prominent and active business and public men, and that the South must expect to be speedily overrun by armed hordes from the Northern States. When the carpet-bag of BROWN and the leather trunk of Col. FORBES gave out, the Herald hunted up this dead and forgotten book of Mr. HELPER, and galvanized it into mischievous life. The Members of Congress who have plunged into this discussion are simply eking out the half-finished work of the Herald, with some little additions of their own. All that journal sought to accomplish was to plunge the community into commotion, still further to alarm and excite the South, and to raise a row generally. Its accomplices at Washington have the additional motive of trying to prevent the election of a Republican Speaker.

The Congressional indorsers of this book are certainly in a dilemma. None, so far, have had the courage to avow their approval of its sentiments. Most of them ever since they [illegible] names. They deserve punishment for their heedlessness if not for their heresy. The incident may teach them the folly of the practice which has become so common, of signing papers merely out of good-nature, and without knowing their contents.

That Cloven Foot.

The Tribune is a little startled by a glimpse of "the cloven foot." Naturally enough,—and it will be still more so when it comes fully to understand whose leg the "foot" in question belongs to. It is alarmed even at the hint that its adroit scheme for the election of FERNANDO WOOD, in order to break down Tammany Hall, may possibly end in consolidating the two factions and making the Democratic Party more formidable than ever. Playing with edge-tools is pleasant enough, but it is desirable for beginners always to keep the handle in their own hands. FERNANDO is not the safest of partners, and whoever attempts to eat porridge with him should have a long spoon. He has secured what he wanted from the Republican Party,—a vigorous and active support of their own candidate. This gave him his election as Mayor, and has secured him complete supremacy in the Democratic Party, as well as complete control of the power and patronage of the City. He probably now considers himself capable of taking care of himself.

We can relieve our neighbor on one point. Our information which so startles him, was not official, and may prove to be incorrect. We are not the organ of Tammany Hall, nor have we the remotest shadow of authority to speak for its "virtuous Havemeyers or its orators." They do not deserve the outpouring of wrath to which the Tribune treats them, on the strength of anything we have said or done. They are just as independent of us as we are independent of them. We know nothing of their plans and purposes and have never assumed to disclose either. Our opinion of the Tammany organization is probably just about the same as that entertained by our shocked and startled neighbor. We consider it a corrupt combination of unscrupulous political partisans—quite capable of all the wickedness which the Tribune lays to its charge, and very likely, now that it is defeated, to enter into such a fraternal alliance with Mayor WOOD as that at which we hinted the other day. There are individuals among them who are incapable of anything of the kind—just as there are individual Republicans incapable of aiming at the election of WOOD in order to damage the Democracy and promote their own party ends. But as a party power we have not the remotest faith in Tammany, or the slightest suspicion of its high-minded devotion to the public good. And therefore it is that we suspect it of the design of astonishing the Tribune some day, by revealing to the astute innocents of that partisan concern, the startling fact of Democratic harmony perfectly restored and consolidated by the reëlection of Mayor WOOD.

One thing more, and we have done. We supported Mr. HAVEMEYER in the late election, not as the nominee of Tammany Hall, nor on account of his character and position as a party candidate; but as an honest man, who would make a good City officer, and who would in all probability receive more votes than Mr. OPDYKE, and therefore stand the best chance of defeating WOOD. We do not expect to satisfy the Tribune of the [illegible] in our journal, in the interest of our business in this matter—the [illegible] public impossible of conducting such a newspaper can be independent of parties or politics, how a man may act in a city election, purely with regard to city interests and without reference to Slavery, Kansas or the Presidential election. This is a matter, however, of little consequence. But we may safely appeal to the result, in vindication of the propriety of our course and the wisdom of our advice.

The Virginia Schemes of Revenge.

We published, yesterday, a number of resolutions passed at meetings held in various Counties of Virginia, to determine upon plans of punishing the North for its alleged participation in the Harper's Ferry insurrection. We have said, over and over again, what everybody who knows anything of the North understands perfectly well, that it is no more responsible for BROWN's attempt than the South is responsible for Gen. WALKER's forays in Nicaragua. A good many people here admired BROWN, and a good many people there admired WALKER; but it is about as reasonable to charge every Northerner with inciting slaves to rebel as to charge every man at the South with piracy. We might multiply parallels of this sort ad infinitum, if it were of any use. But our assertions, as well as the plain facts of the case, seem to have about as much influence in the minds of Virginians, in their present temper, as the assurances of a nurse that the cow won't bite her, upon that of a terrified child. We have exhausted argument, protestation, and proof in clearing our skirts of complicity in this affair, and what to do next to put an end to the anxieties with which Virginians are afflicted, we hardly know.

The inability to devise any mode of vindicating ourselves, leaves us, however, ample leisure to reflect upon the odd modes of self-protection upon which our Virginian friends have lighted, as set forth in the proceedings of these county meetings.

The object of these meetings is, evidently in a very small degree, the protection of slave property. The main design of them all is the punishment of the North. What the North has done, we are, as we have said, entirely unable to state; but that Virginia disapproves of it in toto, and seems determined to make us smart for it, there can be no question. We have, however, looked through the resolutions with some care, and are, we confess, unable to discover a trace of any design, the execution of which will cause anybody the least inconvenience except the Virginians themselves. As far as we can judge from this long string of threats and denunciations, their mode of avenging themselves on their enemies is very like the Japanese mode of punishing an insult. It is the custom in that Empire for individuals whose feelings are hurt, to rip themselves up before the eyes of the offender, who is expected instantly to follow their example. There can be no question of the completeness of the vengeance if the wrongdoer can be got to fulfill his part int he transaction; but the risk of his failing to do execution upon himself, it must be admitted is an awful risk for those whom he injures. Our Virginian friends have their knives sharpened, and seem determined to punish their foes, but it is apparently by the mutilation of their own persons. They are devising an elaborate system of self damage without the smallest guarantee that it will be anything but self damage; and in our humble opinion it will be simply that and nothing more. None of the plotters against their peace will rip themselves open.

Vigilance committees are being formed in every county to intercept [illegible], arrest travelers, and persons suspected of holding Anti-Slavery opinions, and try them by Lynch law: in other words, to paralyze trade and commerce, and lower the value of property by introducing into their own country all the vexations of war in a time of profound peace, by diffusing a general feeling of insecurity—by surrounding daily acts of life with terrors and restrictions and misgivings—by, in short, putting into full activity every one of the abuses and abominations which make real estate sell in Naples for two-thirds of what it brings in Sardinia, and which finally drive away every man who places any value either on liberty or law. It would be amusing, if it were not melancholy to witness the simplicity of the Virginian committees, who fancy that by making their own roads impassable by the aid of patrols and passports, they are thus striking a blow at New-York.

Another of the suicidal features of these resolutions is the determination to tax heavily anybody who imports Northern goods, for sale in Virginia, or any Company which purchases a steam-engine or freight car in a non-slaveholding State. If these desperate measures are carried out, the result will simply be that the Virginians will pay more for their clothes, and crockery, and furniture than any other people in the Union. It is insane to suppose that anything would be known of differential duties imposed by Virginia alone in New-York or Massachusetts, except what would be learned from the newspapers. If the whole South united in passing non-intercourse laws, the effect would certainly be formidable; but a tax of $500 a year upon any Virginian shopkeeper who sold Northern goods would afflict nobody but Virginians. To suppose that Virginia herself can just now open up a brisk direct trade with Europe, and establish an emporium for foreign goods as cheap, as well-supplied and as varied, as that of New-York or Philadelphia, is as reasonable as to suppose that A. T. STEWART could make his store pay in Harper's Ferry. In so far as the stock to be had in Richmond would be inferior to that to be had in New-York, the Virginians, and they alone, would be the losers. If it gives them any satisfaction to testify their devotion to Slavery by raising the price of their clothing, and rendering their homes uncomfortable, it is, of course, their own affair. But we may be allowed at least in the name of common sense, to protest against the spectacle which they seem disposed to afford us, of a great State making a fakir of itself in honor of a god, whose claims to veneration are, to say the least, doubtful, and of whose right to exact the worship of self-torture there can be no question whatever.

The Post and Express.

The contrast between the stupidity of the Post and the vivacity of the Express in this country is one of the most astonishing features of our social life. While our Government is slowly and painfully working itself up to something like the ghost of an attempt to rival the splendid modern development of the mail system in Europe, a few enterprising individuals have originated, put into shape and perfected a scheme of internal communication between the remotest sections of the country which defies comparison with any similar institution in the world.

Our national Post-office with its cumbrous machinery, its proverbial irregularity and its [illegible] expense, shows for the side of the Rhine, Tiber of France and Danube very much like the ex-locum of a stick swal away by the side of the storm fleets which passed the Western Allies upon the Crimea, or the Railway trains which thundered down upon the field of Montebello, with their freight of bayonets and rifles. Our expresses girdling the Continent, delivering the gold of California in New-York, and moving the household gods of the New-England emigrant, as swiftly as his person, from Maine to Minnesota, have extracted the maximum of speed, safety and punctuality from the great net-work of highways with which the surface of the United States has, in the last few years, become netted. The one is the amazement and the shame of our people; the other a brilliant triumph of all the qualities which have made us so mighty in material things.

Now that Congress has assembled, professedly, at least, for the purpose of attending to the practical business of the country, we trust that some public-spirited legislator will seize a moment of lull in the war of sectional recriminations, to insist upon an inquiry into the causes of the vast difference to which we here call attention. It has been often urged that the length and desolateness of our mail routes in the least cultivated regions of the South and West, must be suffered to account for many imperfections in our postal administration. But apart from the very obvious consideration that the mere fact of a single horseman's being employed to carry a mail-bag twice a week over a hundred miles of croaking swamp in Arkansas, by no means suffices to explain a delay of five hours in the delivery of letters sent from Washington to New-York, we have the evidence before us constantly that private companies which cover the South and West with their agencies, and whose messengers penetrate beyond the clock-peddler and the colporteur, into the loneliest recesses of the newest States, can yet command the utmost velocity of communication in the least-frequented sections of the country. For the last ten days, for instance, the New-Orleans newspapers have been regularly delivered in this City, by the agents of the Adams Express Company, in advance of the mails, the distance between these two capitals of the North and South being traversed by these agents in from two to four days' less time than by the contractors of the National mails.

If this can be done in one instance, why not in all? If by one private company, why not by the National Government? If the present mail system is really unsusceptible of improvement, why should it not be frankly abandoned at once, and the business of transporting the correspondence of the country be handed over, under proper supervision by the Government to these proved and competent Express Companies?

From Hayti.

SOULOUQUE'S PROPERTY TO BE SOLD—POPULARITY OF THE GOVERNMENT — BANKS, INSURANCE COMPANIES AND LOTTERIES.

Files from Hayti to Nov. 12, are received by the arrival of the brig Ariel.

The Corps Legislatif have decreed the establishment of a Bank, with five millions capital and the privilege of increasing it, at Port-au-Prince, with branches at Cape Haytien, Cayes, Gonaives, Jeremie, Jacmel and Port-au-Paix. The Institution will be under Government control, the officers to be named by the President, and the loans to be made only to agriculturists, and others interested in the tillage of the soil, as it is especially for the benefit of this class that the charter has been granted.

By a Government decree all the confiscated property of the ex-Emperor SOULOUQUE and his family, and of the ex Minister DELVA, are to be publicly sold, and the receipts of the sale to be devoted towards reimbursing to the public treasury the immense sums extracted therefrom by SOULOUQUE and DELVA.

A special deputation has been sent by the President to the Provinces which suffered the most severely by the late storm, and material aid has been given to the unfortunate sufferers.

A decree has been issued to the effect that all public works, the expense of which shall exceed two millions of dollars, national money, shall be referred to the people at an election. The Government is authorized to undertake, without such formality, enterprises involving a less amount.

La Republique, of Nov. 10, expresses the greatest satisfaction with the existing Government, and says that it has instituted a good police and effected the reorganization of the tribunals and their freedom from corruption, and the extension of commerce.

Lotteries have been established with the permission of the Government. The drawing of "The Grand Lottery of Divine Providence" took place on the 2d November, at Jacmel, the aggregate value of the twenty prizes amounting to two thousand dollars. An insurance company, with a capital of three millions dollars, had also been established under the same irreverent title of "The Divine Providence Insurance Company."

President JEFFRARD was in good health, and nothing more was heard of the late rebellion, which was at last considered to be entirely quelled.

PROPOSITION TO PROVIDE THE VESSEL OF ENGLAND OR FRANCE—A GRAND [illegible]

From the Richmond Examiner.

SOUTHWESTERN VIRGINIA, Saturday, Nov. 5, 1859.

MR. EDITOR: The people of this remote portion of the State participate fully with the rest of their fellow citizens in their sentiments upon the late outrageous occurrences at Charlestown and Harper's Ferry. They heard our most sober and conservative men declare that in their opinion the Union is already dissolved. All commend the promptitude of the Executive in action, and the patriotic vigilance and energy of Governor Wise.

The invasion of Brown and his men was considered an outrage upon the South, even M H had been condemned by the entire Northern people; but the general sympathy and commendation he has received from the North make the case for the most [illegible] one that has happened in the history of the Union. It is insult piled on injury. Instead of condemnation of this nefarious act, we hear only approval from the North; instead of regret, the most [illegible] and defiant exultation. If the two sections had been contiguous nations, regarding in profound peace, and this invasion of Brown's had occurred, nothing but the utmost courage of the act by the North, and the severest punishment of its perpetrators, could have prevented a declaration of war; and can the time be tolerated for a moment, that the fact of union in no furnish license and immunity for acts which would constitute a state of war between distinct nations?

This last act, however, and the sympathy and commendation it has so generally received at the North, only caps the climax of injury which the South has had to endure from their section for a long series of years. The Northern people have long since exhausted the vocabulary of insult to the Southern [illegible] have employed against us. Not content with the charge of foul language and [illegible] fame us before the world, they have perverted [illegible] means their ingenuity could suggest for depriving us of our constitutional rights and [illegible] in the enjoyment of our domestic property. They have [illegible] the powers of legislation, they have employed the Press and the pulpit, they have perverted history, meddled the genial streams of literature, and [illegible] all the resources of falsehood for our injury and defamation. And now, when actual war is [illegible] servile insurrection planned, murder, robbery and treason committed, and revolution precipitated, the whole North clap their hands with delight and exultation—many of them going so far as to contribute the leader of the invasion, who was but a common murderer and horse-thief, as a greater hero than Washington—as a Messiah only a little inferior to Jesus Christ. In what strong contrast with this diabolical [illegible] and rabid sympathy with Brown, was the [illegible] of a Secretary of War from Virginia—the State which founded the Confederacy and now receives the first stab from its parricides—who, when informed that such an act was meditated, refused to believe it, because his own native loyalty and faith to the Union made him think such treachery impossible.

The question at length forces itself upon the reflectant South whether she can, from any considerations whatever, longer consent to be insulted and outraged by her partner in the Confederacy? Can she remain true to the Union when such loyalty requires her to be false to herself? One month's delegation to Spain or France of the other, such as that which the North has been for continuous years heaping upon the South, would produce a fierce and murderous war. Is there real peace and union for the South with a section whose whole language towards us is studied insult, and whose whole action, as a partner, is ingeniously contrived and habitually practiced wrong? Is not the honor of the South implicated in this question of Union? and can a nation afford the deliberate sacrifice of its honor? Many of her best citizens have been counseling delay until some overt act of aggression was committed by the North. In not Brown's invasion—organized at the North, aided and abetted by leading men in every part of that section before the fact, and ratified and commended by the Northern people after the fact—as palpable an overt act as can ever be expected or committed?

It may be proper, however, to await a more formal judgment upon recent occurrences, from the Northern people, than they have already pronounced. If this opinion be acquiesced in, I suppose it is the universal sentiment of the South, that the verdict which the people of the hostile section shall render in the Presidential election of next year, shall be taken as deciding whether they approve Brown's overt act or not. For one I have little hope from that verdict. The politicians are intent upon the spoils of the Federal Government. The partiality of the Yankee for the dollar is proverbial; but some whispers not witnessed it can conceive the frantic anxiety for the public dollar. In pursuit of this species of dollar, he regards all means as legitimate, and the foulest dishonesty as neither criminal nor reprehensible, provided it be not exposed.

Except those of our Southern States, our Federal Government is the most economically administered one in the world; and, thanks to the present plan of policy which have been engrafted upon our Federal statute-book by the Democratic Party, the policy cannot be damaged except by a change of the whole plan of our Federal legislation. Until high protective tariff, indiscriminate public land donations, extensive schemes of internal improvement, and a national banking system shall be revived—which can only be done through the agency of Congress Democratic in both branches, and of an Anti-Democratic Executive—these Republican economists for public plunder will never cease their war upon the Democratic Party. The first year which shall witness an uncontrolled Anti-Democratic Administration of the Federal Government, will witness the sudden increase of expenditures two or three hundred per cent. The policy of the Democratic Party is shaped by the strict-construction economists of the South, who want no jobs, and whose constant effort is the reduction of expenditures. The policy of the Anti-Democratic Party of this country is shaped by the worst class of politicians at the North—men who pursue politics as a money-making profession, who regard all means legitimate in political warfare, and no dishonesty as criminal which secures to them a share of public plunder.

It is this class of corrupt politicians who excite the Northern people to constant acts of insult against the South, and who keep the flames of the Abolition agitation constantly supplied with fuel. They make it their employment of life to engender among the people of that section a general sentiment of jealousy and hatred towards our people and institutions. They commenced this work of sectional crimination many years ago for purely political objects—for the purpose of driving the political party which was controlled by the economical politicians of the South from power, and depriving those latter statesmen of that control in Federal administration which they have so long exercised for ends of economy and integrity. These agitators have at length succeeded beyond their expectation. They have raised a storm among the Northern masses which they cannot allay, and which has hopelessly wrecked the Union. They have wrought up the Northern people—totally misinformed, or rather, most grievously misinformed on the whole subject of Slavery and Southern institutions—to a pitch of rampant fanaticism that can now be controlled by no restraints, moral or political. The voice of Conservatism is drowned in the roar of the Abolition flow. The Conservative class of the North is cowed, dumb and terror-stricken before the wild beast that strides over the land.

The whole North is crazed on this subject of Slavery. They have arrived at that state of frenzy which prevailed in France during the Revolution and Reign of Terror. They have lost the power to discriminate between right and wrong, between what is noble and what is base. They extol the most criminal and truculent acts as righteous in the sight of Heaven and worthy of all praise among men. They exalt the basest monsters in human shape into heroes and cherished agents of Heaven in the accomplishment of its work. Their most popular pulpits rival the Jacobin Clubs of Paris in the blasphemy and intolerance of their utterances. I see no other issue for this frenzy of fanaticism than the same which controlled France for ten years in darkness, terror and death. The inevitable [illegible] frantic people [illegible] of gross popular delusion, is in blood. The frenzy of the French people was only quenched in rivers of blood; and the infatuation of our Northern enemies seeks the same wholesale sacrifice. RALPH WALDO EMERSON—whose genius is of the sort that delights to grovel in cant and fanaticism—panegyrized Old Brown as an martyr—as the apostle of an idea, which, bringing him as a second Messiah to the scaffold, must eventuate in the emancipation of millions of bondmen. And what is this irrepressible idea thus inaugurated in Brown? Why, it is the old Jacobin idea of the Parisian clubs, of the absolute equality of men—the very same idea whose realization was the grand desideratum sought during the Reign of Terror—the same identical Moloch to which one million of human beings were immolated in France. It was for this idea that the vilest monsters incarnate were elevated to rule in that unhappy country—that dames and men and children were shot down by the hundreds at a time, arranged in long lines before the mouths of cannon; or drowned by boat-loads in deep rivers, bound up in sacks. It was for the establishment of this right of equality that the guillotine was erected, and a million of human beings deprived of the right to live. The frenzy of the Northern people is hurrying them into the same excess of intolerance. It seems to me impossible for any reflecting man to persuade himself that the preservation of Union is feasible with a section whose people are fanatically deaf to reason and all considerations of interest, and madly resolved, at every cost and sacrifice, to push an impracticable idea to an impossible accomplishment.

It would be worse than madness for the South to delay longer the proper preparations for meeting the coming aggressions. It behooves her at once to put herself in an attitude of defence, alike from assault without and insurrection within. Each State should organize a public guard at its capital of five hundred or a thousand men, capable of being dispatched at a moment's warning to any point of danger in the interior.

At the same time each county should ma have been been [illegible] ... will stand ... to the Union, if it ... of the Republican ... this party, which is having only ... with slavery in the States. It was only ... which they claimed jurisdiction under their ... Constitution, and from which they became ... In numbers, they were emboldened to ... that they would eventually abolish Slavery everywhere ... both Houses of Congress, the Judiciary, the Executive, and change the Constitution, when they had the power, so as to deprive us of our slave property. After having been thus beaten upon their chosen principles, we find them now declaring the Government cannot exist as part free and part slave—that its nature and compromises must be changed or the Union dissolved. They have become impatient; and now, greatly strengthened in numbers, having prepared the minds of their adherents for the catastrophe, their leaders fully informed of this plot, if they did not plan it, are willing to do or dare anything to effect their purpose. Wiser and better than the patriots of the Revolution, or more holy than Dr. CLARK, than Moses, the Apostles, and even Christ himself, they must have an Anti-Slavery Constitution, an Anti-Slavery Bible, and an Anti-Slavery God. The old ones will not do for these latter-day saints, reason and experience, the venerated old books and doctrines, as promulgated by Christ, the law-givers, and the Apostles, don't suit their purposes, and they must inaugurate new systems of government, new books of religion, and have an improvement upon its author. The old ones are good enough for us. This new party, with its monstrous doctrines, the fruits of which have been recently developed in the Kansas troubles in resistance to the laws, and in the Harper's Ferry affair, widely extended over the Free States, and through a portion of its venal presses, its fanatical lecturers, its licentious preachers, reckless Senators and Governors of States, attempting openly to justify this last conspiracy, known as it was to some of the most distinguished and wealthy men there, warns us of the danger we are constantly exposed to. No matter how another portion of this party may deny their complicity in this affair, there is no denying their principles, directly to such results, and for these results they ought to be held responsible. Our slave property is threatened, our homes are threatened, our lives, and those of our wives and children, are threatened, and all the blessings we derive from the Constitution and the Union are threatened; and reason and justice, common sense and prudence, teach us that we must adopt efficient measures of protection. A common sense of danger must bring us to a common position of self-preservation.

AN ABOLITIONIST BETRAYED BY SLAVES.

The Raleigh (N. C.) Register has the following item:

"We learn from a friend that a man who says his name is JOHN D. WILLIAMS has been arrested and confined in Hillsborough jail, on a charge of tampering with slaves. He is about 25 years of age, and is traveling as a book-agent. He was twice betrayed by slaves, to whom he communicated his Abolition sentiments. He was still in jail on the 3d. We would not be surprised to hear that he has been lynched. He no doubt will be, if he should not leave as soon as he is turned out of jail."

The same paper says:

"On Friday night a free negro named BOYD BASS was whipped at Smithfield, for expressing Abolition sentiments. He was whipped well, and then ordered to leave."

THE CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN GOV. WISE AND PRESIDENT BUCHANAN.

From the Constitution, Dec. 6

The Governor having, in his late message to the Legislature of Virginia, commented with some severity upon the letter addressed by the President to him on the 28th ult., in answer to his letter of the 25th ult., and having communicated both letters to the Legislature, we have obtained a copy of this correspondence, and now publish it for the information of the public.

RICHMOND, Va., Friday, Nov. 25, 1859.

SIR: I have information from various quarters, upon which I rely, that a conspiracy, of formidable extent in means and numbers, is formed in Ohio, Pennsylvania, New-York, and other States, to rescue JOHN BROWN and his associates, prisoners at Charlestown, Virginia. The information, you believe, is "specific enough to be reliable," and you are convinced "that an attempt will be made to rescue the prisoners, and, if that fails, then to seize citizens of this State (Virginia) as hostages, and victims in case of execution."

You do not communicate the facts on which your convictions are founded, in the absence of which it would seem almost impossible that any portion of the people of the States mentioned should be guilty of the atrocious wickedness, as well as folly, of attempting to rescue convicted traitors and murderers from the penalty due to their crimes under the outraged laws of Virginia. You express entire confidence, in which I heartily participate, that the noble Old Commonwealth is abundantly able and willing to carry her own laws into execution. Had this been otherwise, and had you, as the Governor of Virginia, (the Legislature not now being in session,) made application to me for the aid which the Constitution and laws of the United States would enable me to afford, this should have been cheerfully and cordially granted. Still, there is one measure which, on the presumption that your information is well founded, it is both my right and my duty to adopt—that is, to reinforce the guard already stationed at Harper's Ferry. This may become necessary, not only to protect the public property within Federal jurisdiction, but to prevent the insurgents from seizing the arms in the arsenal at that place and using them against the troops of Virginia. I hereby state, that it is possible the additional troops may be required to act as a posse comitatus, on the requisition of the Marshal of the United States for the Western District of Virginia, to prevent the rescue of SERVANS, now in custody, charged with the crime of high treason. I have, therefore, as a precautionary measure, directed the Secretary of War to order two companies of artillery to proceed immediately from Fortress Monroe to Harper's Ferry.

You also inform me that "places in Maryland, Ohio and Pennsylvania have been occupied as depôts and rendezvous by these desperadoes, unobstructed by guards or otherwise, to invade" Virginia, and you advise me of these facts in order that I "may take steps to preserve peace between the States." I am at a loss to discover any provision in the Constitution or laws of the United States which would authorize me to "take steps" for this purpose. It is, doubtless, the imperative duty of the respective State Governments to break up such depôts, and to prevent their citizens from making incursions into Virginia to disturb its peace or prevent the execution of its laws. If the Federal Executive, however, were to enter those States and perform this duty for them, it would be a manifest usurpation of their rights. Were I thus to act, it would be a palpable invasion of their sovereignty, and, as a precedent, might prove highly dangerous. My authority for calling out the militia, or employing the army and navy, is derived exclusively from the acts of Congress of the 28th February, 1795, and the 3d March, 1807, which, clearly, do not embrace such a case as is now presented. It will not be pretended that such incursions from one State into another would be an invasion of the United States "from any foreign nation or Indian tribe," under the act of February, 1795, rendering it lawful for the President to employ the federal forces "to repel such invasion."

In conclusion, I beg to express the hope that, whether the information you have received be founded in truth or not, the energetic measures already adopted under your direction will prove sufficient for any emergency that may occur.

Yours, very respectfully,
JAMES BUCHANAN.

To his Excellency, HENRY A. WISE, Governor of Virginia, Richmond, Va.

GOV. CHASE'S LETTER TO GOV. WISE.

The following is Gov. CHASE's letter to Gov. WISE, previously noticed in our dispatches:

STATE OF OHIO, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
COLUMBUS, Dec. 1, 1859.

SIR: Your letter of the 28th ultimo—postmarked 29th—together with a copy of one of the same date, addressed by you to the President, were received yesterday. No intelligence, other than that contained in these letters, has reached us of any such preparations as are described in them, and the letters themselves convey no such information in respect to place or persons as is necessary to enable the authorities of this State, in the absence of other intelligence, to act upon with any certainty or effect. Whenever it shall be made to appear, either by evidence transmitted by you or otherwise, that unlawful combinations are being formed by any persons, or at any place in Ohio, for the invasion of Virginia, or for the commission of crimes against her people, it will undoubtedly become the duty of the Executive to use whatever power he may possess to break up such combinations and defeat their unlawful purposes, and that duty, it need not be doubted, will be promptly performed.

I observe, with regret, an intimation in your letter, that necessity may compel the authorities of Virginia to pursue invaders of her jurisdiction into the territories of adjoining States. It is to be hoped that circumstances will arise preventing, in their opinion, such a necessity. Laws of the United States, as well as the laws of Ohio, [illegible] in which persons charged with crime in [illegible] may be demanded, and must be surrendered; and the people of this State will require from her authorities the punctual fulfillment of every obligation to the other members of the Union. They cannot, however, to the invasion of our territory by armed bands from other States, even for the purpose of pursuing and arresting fugitives from justice.

I have the honor to be,
Very respectfully, Yours, S. P. CHASE.

His Excellency, HENRY A. WISE, etc., &c., &c.

THE CHURCH AND SLAVERY.

"SUNDRY TROUBLE AMONG THE METHODISTS."

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Under the above caption, an extract from the Boston Journal appeared in your edition of this date, which does injustice to an estimable man, as well as to a good cause.

The facts are briefly as follows: The Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church prohibits all traffic in slaves, except for merciful purposes.

Certain ministers, not content with the Discipline as it is, have organized Anti-Slavery Societies in many of the Conferences, for the purpose of so changing the rule as to exclude from membership all slaveholders—thus making non-slaveholding a test of membership.

Believing the proposed change to be a violation of good faith on the part of the Church towards the Border Conferences, as well as lacking in an essential principle of Christianity, that is Charity, an association has been formed, composed of both ministers and laymen, for the purpose of counteracting the pernicious influence of these Anti-Slavery Societies, and of preserving and perpetuating the unity of the Methodist Episcopal Church. To assist in this great work, they have issued a circular containing a list of their officers, their platform, their purposes, and their memorial to the next General Conference. The calm, dignified and Christianlike tone of their documents cannot but secure for them the careful consideration of all who love the Church, and desire her continued prosperity and increased usefulness.

The Association is called the "Ministers and Laymen's Union," and has for its President the venerable Dr. BANGS. Among its officers are such men as Francis Hall, and Daniel Drew, of New-York; Ex-Gov. Harris, of Rhode Island; Ex-Gov. Page, of New-Hampshire; Hon. Jacob Sleeper, of Boston; Messrs. Cummings, of Philadelphia, Owen and Burns of Detroit, Hamilton of Chicago, Hubbard of Dansville, Halsted of Mamaroneck, and a host of other true and tried friends of Methodism. Loyal men not only to the Church, but to the country; not men of one idea in pursuit of a phantom, but of liberal, enlarged and progressive views.

And yet, notwithstanding the purity and strength of its platform, and the respectability of its officers and members, the very gentlemanly editor of Zion's Herald has seen fit to assail it in the most vindictive manner. Has called it a cabal, a mongrel and a hybrid union. Not being satisfied with his own invectives he has allowed his correspondents to misrepresent it, and to assail one of its officers, Rev. G. S. GUSSER, a man respected and beloved by all who know him.

The article to which the correspondent of the journal alludes, signed by a Presiding Elder and four preachers, speaks of Rev. Mr. GUSSER as "a man calling himself GUSSER, and professing to be a Methodist minister," as if he were an impostor. They also say "after sowing tares he went his way," as if he were a devil. Where did this Presiding Elder and these four ministers get leave to use such language toward a brother minister? Surely not at the feet of Him whose command was "Love one another."

What right have these reverend gentlemen to become so indignant simply because one of the officers of this Union has seen fit to invite the cooperation of their brethren in New-England? Do they hold the laymen of New-England in vassalage? Is ministerial domination so rampant that laymen cannot sign a petition without consulting the clergy? No, God forbid! and if I do not mistake the spirit of Methodism in New-England, a rebuke will be administered, both by the clergy and laity, that will make these gentlemen hide their heads in shame.

By reference to our Platform you will find:

"We hold that while it is the duty of the Church to seek the extirpation of Slavery, she should do so by such means only as christian wisdom will justify, and should carefully guard against the destruction of her unity, or the endangering of her usefulness, as an agency in spreading the Kingdom of Christ.

"We hold that the policy of our Church is, and ever has been, to receive into her communion both slaveholders and slaves, whenever they have given evidence of conversion, for the sake of a great and ultimate good, viz.: The bringing of slaveholding under the restraints of Christian discipline and preparing the way for emancipation in a manner consistent with the best interests of masters and slaves."

We believe in the sentiment expressed by HENRY WARD BEECHER in his sermon of Oct. 30, when he said, "In order to labor the most effectually for the emancipation of the slaves I would not need to say one word, except to preach Christ, and purity, and manhood, and to enjoin upon them faithfulness in everything belonging to their state." I will only add that I trust the time has arrived, when the war of fanaticism which has been sweeping over our land, will be rolled back, and Union shall be inscribed on all our banners, and the spirit of brotherly love preside over all our deliberations. A LAYMAN.

CELEBRATED GENUINE OLD TOM.

The trade in London City between England and this country has [illegible] of late years. I have [illegible] ascertain the cause and find that it is no longer wonder at it; for while [illegible] imitations have [illegible] to surpass the genuine article in recognition of merit in [illegible] that it is impossible to prevent this, I would state it is after [illegible] of the United States prohibits the importation of gin in spirits in packages smaller than [illegible] gallons. I have, therefore, taken a new store here in order to better and [illegible] genuine. I will carry and that this is the best Gin made in London, and from its purity is free from [illegible] all other liquors. As a medicine, it stands unrivalled for its salutary effect on the kidneys and other internal organs; while as a convivial liquor, its pure and delicate flavor has rendered it [illegible]

MISCELLANEOUS.

BURNETT'S COCOAINE.

A compound of Cocoa-nut Oil, &c., for dressing the Hair. For efficacy and agreeableness, it is without an equal.

It prevents the hair from falling off.
It promotes its healthy and vigorous growth.
It is not greasy or sticky.
It leaves no disagreeable odor.
It softens the hair when hard and dry.
It soothes the irritated scalp skin.
It affords the richest lustre.
It remains longest in effect.
It costs fifty cents for a half pint bottle.

TESTIMONIAL.

BOSTON, July 19, 1857.

MESSRS. J. BURNETT & CO.: I cannot refuse to state the salutary effect in my own aggravated case, of your excellent Hair-Oil—(Cocoaine.)

For many months my hair has been falling off, until I was fearful of losing it entirely. The skin upon my head became gradually more and more inflamed, so that I could not touch it without pain. This irritated condition I attributed to the use of various advertised hair washes, which I have since been told contain camphene spirit.

By the advice of my physician, to whom you had shown your process of purifying the Oil, I commenced its use the last week in June. The first application allayed the itching and irritation; in three or four days the redness and tenderness disappeared—the hair ceased to fall, and I have now a thick growth of new hair. I trust that others similarly afflicted, will be induced to try the same remedy. Yours very truly,
SUSAN R. POPE,
BURNETT'S COCOAINE.

A single application renders the hair (no matter how stiff and dry) soft and glossy for several days. It is conceded by all who have used it to be the best and cheapest Hair Dressing in the World.

Prepared by JOSEPH BURNETT & CO., Boston, and for sale by dealers generally at 50 cents a bottle.

GROCERIES & PROVISIONS.

A TRUTH.

"It is nothing to gain popularity, but it is rarely that men retain it. Like money, come easy, go easy. popularity is a tender affair, and requires careful nursing to keep it alive. Especially is this observable in mercantile affairs. If the reputation, which is but another name for popularity, be won by actual merit, it is lasting. Mr. THOMAS R. AGNEW, the well-known importer, grocer, flour and tea-dealer, No. 269 Greenwich and 99 Murray-st., has,
by his straightforward course,
the fairness of his prices,
and the excellence of his stock secured a reputation which will be lasting.
With a capital of $50,000,
he can defy competition, and afford to sell, at either wholesale or retail, at prices to suit everybody. Give him a call and be satisfied with the truth of our assertions."—New-York Atlas.

COMMUNION WITH THE SOUTH.

GREAT UNION DEMONSTRATION IN BOSTON.

Speech of Edward Everett.

LETTER FROM EX-PRESIDENT PIERCE.

BOSTON, Thursday, Dec. 8.

The Union meeting in Faneuil Hall today was thronged even by ex-Gov. LINCOLN, assisted by the Mayor, presiding; Hon. Ex-Governors of the State and the Secession. The principal manufacturers in the State were represented in the organization. The hall was packed in every part, and many hundreds were unable to gain admittance. Rev. Mr. Beecher of the Old South Church, invoked the Divine blessing on the meeting, the State and the nation. The Hon. Ex-Gov. LINCOLN made the opening address, in which he briefly alluded to the events which seemed to call for the present demonstration.

The resolutions were then read, the third of which was as follows:

Resolved, That we look with indignation and shame upon the recent invasion of the Commonwealth of Virginia, and, however we may deprecate the measures of its execution, it was an undisguised attempt upon the peace and welfare of the whole country, and we hereby pledge ourselves to uphold it with our lives and fortunes and our sacred honor. The seventh resolution declared loyalty to the Constitution and all its requisitions and obligations, and that in the spirit of fraternal fellowship we will fully and unreservedly fulfill our constitutional obligations.

The ninth resolution declares that we will discountenance all further intercourse between the North and South, in which resolution commences the apologists for the late raid upon Virginia, and holds as guilty, before God and the country, those who induced it.

Mr. EDWARD EVERETT, who was hailed with every demonstration of respect and enthusiasm, was now introduced, and he spoke as follows:

MR. CHAIRMAN AND FELLOW-CITIZENS: In rising to address you on this important occasion, indulge me with a few words of personal explanation. I did not suppose that anything could occur which would make me think it my duty to appear again on this platform, in any occasion of a political character; and had this meeting been of a party nature or designed to promote any party purposes, I should not have been here. When compelled, by the prostration of my health, five years ago, to resign the distinguished place which I then held in the public service, it was with no expectation, no wish, and no intention of ever again engaging in the scenes of public life. I have, accordingly, with the partial restoration of my health, abstained from all participation in political affairs of any kind; partly because I have found a pleasanter employment, and, as I venture to think, a more useful one, in seeking to rally the affections of my fellow-citizens of North and South, to that great name and that memory which is left almost alone of those kindly associations, which once united the different sections of the country together; and, between the extremes of opinion now distracted and now threaten to convulse the country, I had no middle ground of practical influence, on which a friend of moderate counsels can stand. I think I do a little good,—I try to do it by writing years, in augmenting the funds of the charitable institution,—commemorating from the pulpit the noble deed and the great events of the day, and chiefly in my humble efforts to rescue the reputation and the vicissitudes of private property, to and the grave of WASHINGTON. There, I hope, I may be permitted to enjoy the appropriate occupation for the decline of life. I am more than content with the honor with which these, and a humble ministry, was rewarded by the great majority of my countrymen; and knowing by experience how unsatisfying to the enjoyment are the brightest prizes of political ambition, I gladly resign the pursuit of them to younger men.

But the North and the South, including the Northeast and Southwest, have become fiercely, bitterly arrayed against each other. There is no place left in this life for those who love them both. The war of words—of the Press, of the platform, of the State Legislature, and, I ask, the pulpit!—has been carried to a point of exasperation, which, on the slightest outward accident, may rush to the bloody settlement of the sword. The great ancient master of political science (Aristotle) tells us that though revolutions do not take place for small causes, they do from small causes. He means, sir, that when the minds of the community have become hopelessly embittered and exasperated by long-continued irritation, the slightest occurrence will bring on the catastrophe.

Now, sir, it seems to me that we have reached a state of things which requires all good men and good patriots, for a time at least, to sink all more party projects and calculations, and to abandon all ordinary political issues; which calls, in a word, upon all who love the country and dread the shock of its dissolution, to rally on the ground of those principles which we have till lately enjoyed under the Constitution transmitted to us by our Fathers, and which I regard as the noblest work of political wisdom ever achieved,—to meet as one man, and to take counsel for its preservation. It is this feeling that has brought me here to-day.

I may possibly be told, Sir, that those who entertain views like these exaggerate the gravity of the crisis. I wish I could think so. But I fear it is not we who exaggerate, but those who differ from us, who greatly—and soon, I fear it will be, fatally—underrate the ominous signs of the times. I fear, Sir, that they are greatly misled by the one-sided views exclusively presented by the party Press, and those who rely upon the party Press exclusively for their information, and that they are dangerously ignorant of the state of opinion and feeling in the other great part of the country. I greatly fear that the mass of the community, long accustomed to treat all alarm for the stability of the Union as groundless, all apprehension for its preservation as insincere, or, if sincere, the result of nervous timidity, have omitted themselves to measure the extent and the imminency of the existing danger. It is my own deliberate conviction, formed from some opportunities of personal observation, and from friendly correspondence with other parts of the country (though I carry no name of a political nature), that we are on the very verge of a convulsion, which will shakes the Union to its foundation; and that a few more steps forward, in the direction in which affairs have moved for the years past, will bring us to the catastrophe.

I have heard it urged on former occasions of danger, that it must be groundless, because business goes on as usual, and the theatres are crowded as they keep up. Sir, these appearances are not delusive. The great social machine goes on with a momentum that cannot be suddenly stopped. The ordinary operations of business went on in France, in the revolution of 1789, till the annihilation of the circulating medium put a stop to everything that required issues. The theatres and all the other places of public amusement were crowded to excess in the reign of terror. The French stocks never stood higher than they did in Paris on the 21st of January, 1848. On the 24th of that month Louis Philippe was flying in disguise from his capital; the Republic was proclaimed, and the oldest monarchy in Europe ceased to exist.

I hold it to be time then, Sir, as I have said, for good men and good patriots, casting aside all more party considerations, and postponing at least all ordinary political issues, to pause; to look steadily in the face the condition of things to which we are approaching; and to ask their own consciences whether they can do nothing to avert the crisis, and bring about a happier and better state of things. I do not ask them to search the past for topics of reproach or recrimination on men or parties. We have had enough of that, and it has contributed materially to bring about our present perilous condition. In all countries where speech and the Press are free, especially those countries which by controlling general causes fall into two great sections, each possessing independent local legislatures and centres of opinion and influence, there will in the lapse of time inevitably be action and reaction of word and deed. Violence of speech, or of act, on the one side, will unavoidably produce violence of speech and act on the other. Each new grievance is alternately cause and effect—and if, before resorting to healing measures, we are determined to run over the dreary catalogue, to see who was earliest or who has been most to blame, we engage in a controversy in which there is no arbiter, and of which there can be no settlement.

But without reviving the angry or sorrowful memories of the past, let me, in all friendliness, ask the man who has either contributed to gain by a dissolution of the Union, with reference to that terrible question, which it threatens to destroy it, I ask patriotic men in both sections to run over in their minds the dangers, if the existing state of things, and then ask themselves dispassionately, whether anything is to be hoped, by shaking the present Union, as that fatal bourne from which, as from death, there is no return? Will the South gain stability for her social system, or increase the value of her property? Will the North gain more territory for free labor? Will any shade of opinion, extreme or moderate, be more favorably heard? Will any measure, any object of the subject be correct, which can be pursued without more suicidal than to allow these dangerous appearances to result in a revolution, which, in the present sections of the country, would be attended with all the evils which they allow themselves to be led, subject to a peaceful consummation.

But I shall be told, I hear, that all this is mere fancy; that the chance of any such result is speculative, or, rather, a groundless panic, the offspring of a heated imagination, or, if it is not, that it is a remote possibility, less than serious anxiety. But I am no alarmist. I have been, except for a few hours at Harper's Ferry, which, in the conclusion of the first surprise, and in ignorance of the extent of the danger, the alarming appearance of the extent of the danger, the alarming appearance of the extent of the danger, the alarming appear
